❖ Dear Maya

This is your “Complete Natal Chart” — a reading of your natal chart by the rules of Vedic astrology, Jyotisha. It is neither a magazine horoscope nor a prediction of fate: it is a detailed description of what the sky looked like at the moment you were born — March 14, 1992 · 07:20 · Vienna, Austria — and what the classical tradition says about such a placement of the planets.

How this report was made. First, a precise astronomical calculation: the positions of the planets, the ascendant, the houses, the nakshatras and the periods were computed from the Swiss Ephemeris in the sidereal zodiac (Lahiri ayanamsha), to the arc minute. Then the text was composed from those numbers: it was written by an artificial intelligence, and every statement in it rests on a specific fact from the appendix — the tables and diagrams at the end of the report. If a claim looks doubtful, open the appendix: it shows which calculation it grew from.

How to read it. The report moves from the general to the particular. Part I is who you are by the chart: the rising sign, the Moon, the strong and the weak planets. Part II covers the areas of life: home, vocation, relationships. Part III is about time: periods and transits, including the current one. The chapters do not depend on one another — read in order, or start with what matters to you now.

The main thing. A chart describes tendencies and “weather”, not a verdict. It does not override your choices and does not replace a doctor, a lawyer or a financial adviser. Take what resonates and test it against life.

What we do not do. We do not frighten: a chart describes tendencies, not a verdict. We do not pick remedies at random: by the tradition, a gemstone is chosen from the whole chart (functional benefics, the running dasha), with mantra and charity as the foundation.

The text of this report was generated by artificial intelligence and may contain errors; the astronomical calculations were performed by software and are given in the appendix.

With respect, the JyotiSoft team

❖ A letter to you

Dear reader,

Before you turn to the chapters that follow, let me tell you what stands out most when I look at your chart as a whole.

At its summit sits a fire that has learned to build. Mars, the ruler of your Aries ascendant, is exalted in your 10th house. Beside it, Saturn holds its own sign. Together they form two great-person yogas, Ruchaka and Sasa, in Capricorn, the strongest sign of your chart. Mars also looks straight back at your ascendant. This is why your sense of who you are grows through visible, purposeful work: you come to know yourself through what you make real.

Yet this chart is not only about the summit. Your soul's teacher, the Atmakaraka, is a vargottama Moon in Gemini with Ketu beside it. That is a quick, listening, intuitive mind that finds its calm through expression. Jupiter, the strongest planet you have, sits in your 5th house. It makes learning, teaching and creating a deep and reliable resource. In the quiet of your 12th house, Sun and Mercury add a reflective intelligence that works best away from noise.

The recurring theme, then, is balance between outer achievement and inner rest. Your 10th house is powerful. Your 4th house of home and your 12th house of rest ask for more conscious care. Ambition that is paced tends to become lasting authority, and ambition that is rushed tends to tire you. Protect your quiet, and your drive has somewhere to return to.

You are now in the Mercury major period, and its Rahu sub-period began on August 10, 2026. It is a season that widens horizons and invites an unconventional search for meaning. You are not in Sade Sati at present, and the coming years hold real windows of support from Jupiter.

None of this is fixed. The chart shows inclinations, and the choices remain yours. I hope these pages help you make those choices well.

With warmth, Jyoti

Core of the Self

A VEDIC READING

❖ 2.1 The Ascendant

A fire that learned to build: the self you discover through what you create

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

1st house: Aries

The deciding factor in your core self is where the ruler of your ascendant has gone. Your rising sign is Aries, but its ruler, Mars, is not at home. It stands in the 10th house, the place of career, reputation and visible achievement, and it is exalted there. You come to know yourself through action, and above all through work that others can see.

The spark: Aries rising in Ashwini

Your ascendant degree is 3°48', in the nakshatra Ashwini, pada 2. Aries is the sign that opens the zodiac. It carries the energy of beginnings: direct, quick to act, honest about what it wants, and happier moving than waiting. Ashwini gives that fire a particular colour. This nakshatra is linked with the divine healers who arrive swiftly when help is needed, so there is a natural instinct in you to respond, restore and set things in motion again. People often feel you as someone who gets things started and brings energy into a room.

No planet sits in your ascendant itself. That makes its ruler, and the planets that look at it, the true storytellers of your personality. Here they speak with unusual clarity.

Where the ruler lives: Mars in Capricorn

Mars sits in the 10th house, in Capricorn, in the nakshatra Dhanishta, pada 1, and it is exalted. It is hard to give your personal fire a better outlet. In Capricorn the raw impulse of Aries becomes strategic, patient and purposeful. Your drive stops being a sprint and becomes a campaign. Dhanishta is associated with rhythm and timing, and it suggests ambition that works best when it keeps a steady beat instead of bursting and fading.

The ruler of that sign, Saturn, sits right beside it, itself in own sign. This pairing is central to who you are. Your initiative (Mars) is yoked to discipline and endurance (Saturn). The two do not always agree at first. One wants speed, the other wants structure. When they cooperate, they produce work that lasts. Mars exalted in this angle of the chart also forms what the tradition calls Ruchaka Yoga, a classical mark of courage, capability and leadership. It is explored more fully in its own chapter, and it matures with the effort you put into it.

The gaze that returns home

From its seat in the 10th house, Mars turns its glance back onto the 1st house, onto your own Aries ascendant, with full weight. This matters a great deal. Your ruler is not lost in its career placement. It keeps looking back at you, so what you achieve out in the world feeds your vitality, confidence and sense of self in return. Success tends to energise you rather than empty you, especially when the work feels truly your own.

Mars also looks at the 4th house, in Cancer, the area of home, inner peace and emotional rest. Here the same drive can bring pressure: work comes home, or home becomes another project to manage. Mars also looks at the 5th house, in Leo, the area of creativity, learning and joy. That is a happier contact. It brings enthusiasm and courage to whatever you create or teach.

The planets that look at you

Your ascendant receives two more glances. The first comes from Jupiter, the strongest planet in your chart with a measured strength of 100%. Its gaze on the 1st house is protective. It adds generosity, perspective and a sense of meaning to all that fiery momentum, and it helps you learn from setbacks instead of simply pushing through them. When you feel driven to act, this influence is the inner voice that asks what for? It is a steadying gift.

The second glance comes from Rahu, with a lighter touch. It adds a hunger for the unusual, a willingness to reinvent yourself, and at times a restlessness about who you are becoming.

You are now in the Rahu sub-period of your Mercury main period, so this curiosity about new horizons may feel more noticeable than usual. It is best used as fuel for exploration, not as pressure to overturn your life.

Strength and vitality

Mars carries a measured strength of 74% (6.8 rupas), which is solid and dependable. It is not the strongest planet in your chart. Saturn stands at 82% and Jupiter at 100% . The picture is clear: your personal fire works best in partnership with patience and wisdom, not on its own.

Your vitality tends to be robust and quick to recover, and it renews itself through movement, purpose and clear goals. The areas to pay attention to follow the same pattern. With Mars and Saturn working together in the career sector, there is a tendency to carry too much and to hold tension in the body without noticing. With the ruler's glance falling on home and rest, recovery time can quietly get squeezed out. Regular movement, real sleep and a home that feels like shelter rather than a second office all support you well. For any health concern, please consult a qualified doctor, who can look at the whole of you.

What this means for you

At your core you are a builder with a spark. You start things with Aries courage and finish them with Capricorn resolve. Your identity is bound up with doing, contributing and being seen to deliver. That is a strength, as long as you remember that you are more than your output. The chart describes a fire meant to warm and to build, and it thrives when it is paced.

◆ ESSENCE

Your ascendant ruler Mars is exalted in the 10th house and looks straight back at you, so your sense of self grows through visible, purposeful work. Paired with Saturn's discipline and blessed by Jupiter's gaze, this fire is built for lasting achievement when it is paced rather than rushed.

✻ PRACTICE

Give your drive a daily physical outlet, such as a brisk walk, a run or strength training, and set a fixed evening hour after which work stays outside your home.

⚠ NOTE

The combined push of Mars and Saturn can turn into overwork and tension that follows you home. Protect your rest deliberately with a regular sleep rhythm, one unhurried day each week, and a quiet corner at home kept free of tasks. Consult a qualified doctor for any physical concern.

A VEDIC READING

❖ 2.2 The Moon

A quick, listening mind that finds its calm through expression

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

4th house: Cancer

The factor that shapes your emotional life most is where your Moon sits: in Gemini, in the 3rd house, at 28°24', in the nakshatra Punarvasu, pada 3. This is a mind built for movement, conversation and exchange. Your feelings rarely stay silent inside you for long. They want to be named, discussed, written down and understood. When you can put an emotion into words, it usually becomes manageable. When there is no outlet, it tends to circle.

A mind that lives in words

Gemini is an air sign ruled by Mercury, and your Moon is comfortable here, well hosted by the planet that owns the sign. The 3rd house governs communication, the hands, short journeys, siblings and neighbours, courage and self-made effort. With the Moon placed here, you tend to feel most like yourself when you are doing something with what you think: writing, teaching, messaging, crafting, learning a new skill, talking a problem through with someone you trust. For you, emotional security is less about stillness and more about connection and a sense of motion.

Your Moon also sits late in its sign, at 28°24'. This placement often carries a certain maturity of feeling, closer to the completion of a phase than its beginning. You may notice that you process experiences thoroughly, returning to what happened until it finally makes sense.

Punarvasu: the return of the light

Punarvasu carries the theme of renewal: light returning after darkness, the arrow that comes back to its quiver, the traveller who comes home. It is a generous, forgiving nakshatra, and it tends to give the capacity to begin again, to recover optimism and to rebuild after disappointment. You were also born while the Moon was growing in light, which adds to this sense of replenishment. Resilience of spirit is among your deepest emotional resources, even on days when it does not feel that way.

The companion beside your Moon

Ketu shares the 3rd house with your Moon. Ketu is the point of detachment and inner knowing, and next to the planet of the mind it gives an intuitive, somewhat inward quality to feeling. You may sense things before you can explain them, read a room quickly, or suddenly step back from a situation to see it from the outside. Sometimes this creates a gap between what you feel and what you show, and others may read you as calmer or more distant than you really are.

This is not coldness. It is a mind that needs space to digest before it responds. It settles best through structure: regular routines, time alone without screens, writing, and conversations that go below the surface. Given those, the same quality becomes real intuition and a rare ability to stay clear-headed while others are swept along.

What your Moon faces

Your Moon casts its full gaze across the chart onto the 9th house, in Sagittarius, where Rahu sits. Seen from your Moon, then, Rahu stands directly opposite. The mind is continually drawn toward wider horizons: unusual teachers, other cultures and philosophies, questions of belief and meaning. For you, the search for meaning is emotional as well as intellectual. The Rahu-Ketu axis running through your Moon asks for balance. Ketu offers inner knowing, and Rahu offers the hunger to understand more. Held together, they describe a genuine seeker, someone who asks good questions and does not settle for easy answers.

Home and the heart's foundation

Your Moon is also the lord of the 4th house, which falls in Cancer and stands for home, mother, inner peace and emotional roots. With its lord placed in the 3rd house, in Gemini, your sense of home is tied to connection and exchange. A home alive with conversation, books and people you love tends to nourish you more than a silent one.

The 4th house also receives the full gaze of Mars, your ascendant lord, placed in the 10th house in Capricorn, and of Saturn beside it. Ambition and duty tend to press on the space where you rest, and work can quietly follow you home. None of this weakens your foundations. It means that inner peace is something you build on purpose rather than something that simply happens. Protected evenings, a room of your own and clear edges around work let the drive of your career and the needs of your heart support each other.

Strength, and the view from your Moon

Your Moon has a strength rating of 65% (6.0 units), which is moderate and workable. It is not the strongest planet in your chart: Jupiter leads at 100% , and Saturn follows at 82% .

Still, it is steady enough to carry you well, especially when you lean on those stronger allies of wisdom and discipline.

As a second starting point for reading the chart, your Moon describes the life of a communicator and seeker. Your ascendant is in Aries, in the nakshatra Ashwini, and it adds fire and speed to this airy emotional centre. The contrast is real: Aries tends to act first, while Gemini tends to think first. You will often feel both impulses at once. When you let the mind name the feeling before the body acts on it, you usually make your best decisions.

The chapter you are in now

You are now in the major period of Mercury, the planet that rules your Moon's sign, and the sub-period of Rahu, the node your Moon faces. That places your mind at the centre of this chapter. Study, speech, writing, analysis and the search for meaning are all especially active. Mercury carries good strength in your chart (77%), so the mental gifts of this period are real. The work is to give them direction, and to give your nervous system enough rest to keep pace with them.

◆ ESSENCE

Your Moon in Gemini, in the 3rd house and the nakshatra Punarvasu, gives you a quick, articulate and resilient mind that steadies itself through expression. With Ketu beside it and Rahu opposite, your feelings run deep and intuitive, and they are pulled toward meaning. They settle best through routine, writing and honest conversation.

✿ PRACTICE

Keep a short evening writing ritual: a few minutes with pen and paper to name what you felt that day and what you want to release. It gives your Moon in Gemini the outlet it needs and helps turn the inward pull of Ketu into clarity rather than distance.

⚠ NOTE

A mind this active can overload, especially while the ruler of your Moon's sign is running the major period. It may show up as restlessness, racing thoughts or unsettled sleep, so treat these as areas to watch. The remedy is gentle and practical: a fixed wind-down time, less screen time late in the evening, a walk outdoors, and protected quiet at home. If sleep or anxiety trouble you persistently, please consult a qualified doctor.

❖ 2.3 The Sun

A quiet light that shines inward before it shines out

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

1st house: Aries

Where your light stands

Your Sun sits in the 12th house, in Pisces, at $0^{\circ}10'$, right at the opening of the sign, in the nakshatra Purva Bhadrapada, pada 4. This placement decides how you carry your sense of self. This part of the chart governs retreat, reflection, dreams, sleep and distant places. It is where the self listens rather than announces. Your confidence is real, but it tends to be inward and quiet. It is the certainty of someone who has thought a thing through alone before saying it aloud.

The sign itself deepens this. It is a sign of compassion, imagination and dissolving boundaries, and it asks the ego to serve something larger than itself. Your Sun sits there as a welcome guest. Its host is Jupiter, which is also Jupiter, the strongest planet in your whole chart at 100%. So even in a house of retreat, your core self is looked after by a wise and generous protector. Your Sun carries a solid strength of 70%. It is neither faint nor overbearing, and it is well able to hold its ground.

The flavour of your nakshatra

Purva Bhadrapada brings idealism and intensity. It is a devotion to causes, principles and inner transformation. With your Sun here, your sense of who you are is tied to what you believe in. You are likely to feel most yourself when your effort serves a meaning rather than applause. There is a quiet fire under the gentleness. You may seem calm on the surface while holding very firm convictions underneath.

A companion in thought

Mercury shares this placement with your Sun, forming the Budha-Aditya Yoga, a combination that links identity and intellect. Mercury is debilitated by sign, yet it holds a strong 77% in overall strength. The result is not a weak or confused mind. It is an intuitive, reflective and imaginative way of thinking, one that works best in research, writing, quiet analysis or behind-the-scenes problem-solving. Because Mercury is the ruler of your current major period, these years give extra weight to this thoughtful, inward-facing side of your self.

Where the light is directed

From its seat, your Sun casts its gaze onto the 6th house, in Virgo. This is the area of daily work, service, habits and overcoming obstacles. It gives your sense of self a very practical outlet. You tend to build confidence by being useful, solving concrete problems, and keeping a steady routine. You may find your worth most clearly in the dependable daily contribution rather than in grand gestures.

Two kinds of self

Your rising sign is Aries, and its ruler Mars is exalted in the 10th house, in Capricorn. That outer layer of you is driven, visible and action-oriented. Your Sun adds a gentler inner layer beneath it: reflective, compassionate and private. The two are not in conflict. The outer self gets things done. The inner self knows why. You feel most whole when your public achievements stay connected to that quiet source of meaning.

The father and the father-line

The Sun also speaks of the father and of those who carry authority in your life. From the 12th house, the tendency is for this relationship to carry a certain distance or quietness. Your father may have been absorbed in work, drawn to spiritual or faraway interests, or simply more present in spirit than in everyday closeness. It can also describe a father whose influence reached you in subtle, idealistic ways. Jupiter watches over this placement, which softens the pattern. Honouring the father-line through remembrance, gratitude or a small act of charity in his name can feel surprisingly settling for you.

Confidence, and claiming it

The main growth edge here is visibility. With your Sun in a house of retreat, you may tend to underestimate yourself, hand credit to others, or keep your best work hidden. Nothing in the chart requires this. Your Sun is steady, well hosted and supported by strong thinking. The work is simply to put your name on what you create, and to trust that quiet confidence counts as confidence.

Vitality, which the Sun also describes, is closely tied to rest in your chart. Good sleep, real solitude and time away from noise are not luxuries for you. They are how your inner light recharges.

◆ ESSENCE

Your Sun in the 12th house, in Pisces, gives you a quiet, reflective and compassionate sense of self, protected by the chart's strongest planet, Jupiter. Your confidence grows through meaningful, useful work and through letting yourself be seen for it.

✿ PRACTICE

Spend a few minutes in morning daylight soon after waking; traditionally this is an offering of water to the Sun while facing east. Then note one thing you did well the day before that you would usually let pass unnamed.

⚠ NOTE

With your Sun in the 12th house, you may tend to give your energy away quietly until you feel drained, so rest and sleep are areas to pay attention to. The remedy is simple and steady: set a clear end to your working day, protect regular sleep, and keep some time alone each week. If tiredness or low energy persists, please consult a qualified doctor.

❖ 2.4 The Atmakaraka

A soul that learns through the mind, and keeps finding its way back to the light

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

The factor that decides this whole chapter is simple and quite rare. In your chart the Atmakaraka, the planet that carries the soul's central desire, is the Moon, the mind itself. It sits in Gemini, in your 3rd house, at 28°24', in the nakshatra Punarvasu, pada 3. Everything else in this section builds on that one fact.

Your soul's planet: the mind

When the mind is the soul's significator, the deepest lesson is emotional: to feel fully without being ruled by feeling, and to become a steady place for yourself and for others. In Gemini and in your 3rd house, that lesson runs through words, questions, learning, peers and siblings, short journeys, and the courage to speak up. You tend to understand what you feel by saying it, writing it or talking it through. The sign's ruler, Mercury, is the lord of language and thought, so your inner life and your intellect are closely woven together.

The nakshatra Punarvasu is the star of return, of light coming back after it has scattered. Its gift is renewal: you can lose your thread, gather it again and begin fresh, often wiser than before. With a strength of 65%, this significator is solid and workable, not fragile. Its gaze falls on your 9th house in Sagittarius, the area of meaning, teachers and faith, so your mind naturally reaches past facts towards the question of why.

Ketu shares this same part of your chart. This does not make you cold. It gives you intuition and quick perception, and a real need for inner quiet. Sometimes it also brings a feeling of standing slightly apart from your own emotions. That detachment is raw material for wisdom, and it becomes wisdom when the mind is given structure: routines, writing, and conversation with people you trust.

The karakamsa: the same sign, confirmed

In the navamsa, the chart of inner purpose, your soul's planet is vargottama. It stands again in Gemini, in the 2nd house counted from the navamsa ascendant in Taurus. That sign, Gemini, is your karakamsa, the soul's deepest destination.

The repetition matters. What you want on the surface and what your soul wants underneath point the same way: towards understanding, exchange and connection. The path shows itself through learning and teaching, writing, translating ideas between people, and bringing others together through conversation. Because it falls in the 2nd house of the navamsa, your words carry weight in your inner life. How you speak, what you value and what you choose to nourish yourself with shape your growth directly.

The rest of the karaka team

- Amatyakaraka: Mars, placed in the 10th house, in Capricorn, and exalted. This is the one who carries the soul's purpose out into the world, and it is exceptionally capable. The soul thinks and feels, and this planet acts, visibly and with discipline.
- Bhratrukaraka: Saturn. Peers, siblings and sustained effort. Endurance is part of your support system.
- Matrukaraka: Mercury. Mother and nurturing. This is also the ruler of your soul's sign, which ties care and communication together.
- Putrakaraka: Jupiter. Children, students and creative work, the people and projects you help to grow.
- Gnatikaraka: Venus. Competition and challenges. Friction here sharpens you rather than defeats you.
- Darakaraka: the Sun, placed in the 12th house, in Pisces. This leans towards a bond with someone who shares your inner, reflective life, and the partnership deepens through quiet understanding.

The path of growth

Your soul's arc runs from restless curiosity to a calm, deep mind. The quick, many-sided intelligence of Gemini learns to settle. The detachment that Ketu brings becomes perspective. Then the strong Amatyakaraka turns that clarity into work others can see. The current Mercury period is ruled by the lord of your soul's sign, so this lesson is very much alive now.

The sub-period of Rahu adds an appetite for new horizons and unfamiliar ideas. This is a good time to study, write and give your thinking a clear form.

◆ ESSENCE

Your Atmakaraka is the Moon in Gemini, and it is vargottama. Your soul grows through the mind, through learning, speaking and connecting, and it matures by turning a quick, curious inner life into calm, steady understanding.

✿ PRACTICE

Keep a short daily writing ritual at the same hour each day: a few lines on what you felt and what you learned. For a mind ruled by Gemini, putting experience into words is the most direct way to steady it.

⚠ NOTE

With the Moon and Ketu together, the mind can drift, scatter across too many interests, or feel briefly disconnected from its own feelings. The remedy is gentle and practical: a fixed daily rhythm for sleep and meals, one main project at a time, and regular honest conversation with a trusted person. Structure turns this sensitivity into intuition.

❖ 2.5 Planetary Strengths

Where your chart carries its weight, and where it asks for gentler care

How strength is read here

This measure weighs how much force each planet has to deliver what it promises. It is not a verdict of good or bad. A strong planet brings its themes with less friction, and a quieter planet brings them with more effort. In your chart every planet measured this way scores well, and the lowest sits at 65%. So the range runs from strong to very strong, not from strong to failing. Your task is to know which planets you can lean on and which ones need a steadier hand.

Your pillars

Jupiter at 100%. This is the strongest planet in your chart. It sits in a friendly sign in your 5th house, the area of learning, creativity, children, protégés and the joy of making things. It governs your sense of fortune, faith and the teachers who shape you, and also rest, retreat and the art of letting go. At full strength, its promise is dependable: wisdom you have earned, a gift for teaching, and a well of optimism you can draw on when other areas feel heavy. When you are unsure where to turn, study, mentoring and creative work are the ground that holds.

Saturn at 82%, in own sign. This planet sits in your 10th house, the area of career and public standing. It rules that area of life and also your gains, networks and long-held wishes. A planet this strong in its own sign forms Sasa Yoga, one of the classical yogas of eminence. It brings a capacity for structure, patience and work that lasts. What you build slowly here tends to stay built.

Mercury at 77%, marked debilitated. These two facts belong together. The dignity describes how this planet works, and the strength describes how much it can carry, which is a great deal. It sits in your 12th house, the area of solitude, the inner world and distant places, beside the Sun. That pairing forms Budha-Aditya Yoga. Your thinking is therefore reflective, intuitive and imaginative rather than loud. It is best suited to research, writing, quiet analysis and work done behind the scenes. This planet governs communication, courage and skills, as well as daily work, service and healthy competition. It also rules your current Mahadasha, Mercury, so its strength is especially relevant now. This is a period in which skills and careful thought can carry you far.

The lord of your ascendant

Mars at 74%, exalted. As the ruler of your Aries ascendant, this planet speaks for your identity. It sits in Capricorn, in your 10th house, beside Saturn. There it forms Ruchaka Yoga, a yoga of courage and decisive action, and it pairs with Saturn in a raja-yoga combination. It also governs depth, research and self-renewal. Its strength is solid rather than maximal, and it shares its house with the patient, disciplined Saturn. Your drive is at its best when speed agrees to work alongside endurance. When the two cooperate, your ambition turns into achievements that last.

The quieter planets

the Moon at 65% . This planet sits in a friendly sign in your 3rd house, the area of communication and initiative, together with Ketu. It carries your soul's central lesson, and it governs home and emotional peace. Its gentler strength does not mean an unsteady heart. It means the mind settles best through deliberate grounding: regular routines, writing things down, and conversation with people you trust. Your intuition is real, and structure gives it a place to land.

Venus at 68% . This planet sits in a friendly sign in your 11th house, the area of friendship, community and gains. It governs resources, speech and family values, and it also governs partnership. Its promise tends to arrive through networks and trusted peers. Here the effort lies in tending those relationships consistently, because goodwill grows through attention over time rather than all at once.

The Sun at 70% . This planet sits in your 12th house, beside Mercury. It governs creativity, intelligence and children. Its light works quietly: recognition may come through depth and substance rather than display, and your creative work may flourish in private or in settings far from home before it is seen publicly.

The nodes

Rahu and Ketu are not measured on this scale. They are read through their houses and the planets they travel with. Rahu sits in your 9th house and is the lord of your current sub-period, Rahu, which turns your attention toward wider horizons, teachers and meaning.

How it fits together

Your strongest planets govern learning, career and skilled thought, so your direction is well supported. The quieter planets govern the inner life, home, partnership and creative self-expression. Those areas are not weak. They simply ask to be tended on purpose, not left to run on momentum.

◆ ESSENCE

Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury are your pillars, which makes learning, lasting work and careful thought your most reliable resources. The Moon, Venus and the Sun carry their promise with a little more effort, and they respond well to routine, steady friendships and quiet creative time.

✿ PRACTICE

During this Mercury period, give Mercury a daily outlet of a short stretch of writing or focused study, and add a regular act of service or charity. This steadies the mind of the Moon and puts Mercury's strength to work.

⚠ NOTE

With Mars and Saturn both concentrated in your 10th house, ambition can quietly crowd out rest and home life. The remedy is simple and concrete: protect fixed hours for sleep and unhurried time at home, and treat them as seriously as any work commitment. If you notice ongoing tension or fatigue, please consult a qualified doctor.

❖ 2.6 Rahu and Ketu

A seeker's hunger for meaning, a thinker's quiet ease with words

Rahu: Sagittarius · 9th house

Ketu: Gemini · 3rd house

The axis across your life

This part of your chart turns on one line. Rahu sits in the 9th house, the area of belief, teachers, long journeys, higher learning and the father-line. Ketu sits directly opposite in the 3rd house, the area of the everyday mind, speech, writing, siblings, small brave steps and the work of your own hands. Together they draw an axis between what you are learning to trust and what you already know how to do.

Rahu marks the appetite: the direction that feels unfinished, magnetic and never quite satisfied. Ketu marks the skill you arrive with almost by instinct, and which you are here to hold more lightly rather than lean on. Neither end is good or bad. The work of a lifetime is to let the two feed each other.

Rahu in Sagittarius: wanting a truth of your own

Rahu stands at 12°46' in Sagittarius, in the lunar mansion of Mula, pada 4. Mula is the root, the place where things are pulled up so that you can see what lies underneath. With the node of craving here, inherited answers rarely satisfy you. You tend to want to dig to the bottom of a belief, test it and make it yours. Unusual teachers, foreign philosophies, travel and study far from your starting point can all feel like calling cards. Questions about your father and your lineage may also sit closer to the surface than they do for most people.

The dignity of Rahu here is recorded as debilitated. In plain terms, the hunger for meaning can overshoot. You may collect teachers instead of learning from one, or swing between belief systems before one takes root. The steadying factor is in the chart itself. The ruler of this sign, Jupiter, sits in the 5th house, and Rahu casts a lighter glance there, at a weight of 0.5. The search has a trustworthy host: it matures through learning, teaching and creative work you can actually hold in your hands. Rahu moves retrograde, as the nodes always do, and that adds nothing alarming. It simply suggests that meaning is often found by returning, rereading and revisiting.

Ketu in Gemini: a mind that already knows

Ketu stands at 12°46' in Gemini, in the lunar mansion of Ardra, pada 2. Ardra carries the image of the storm that clears the air: thinking that breaks a problem open in order to see it cleanly. Ketu here gives quick, intuitive perception. You often grasp the point before it has been fully spoken. Ketu also shares its place with the planet of your mind and feelings, which makes your inner life intuitive, fast and at times a little detached. This is not coldness. It is a mind that sometimes steps back to watch, and it settles best through structure, writing and honest conversation.

The dignity of Ketu is recorded as debilitated. The risk is not a lack of talent. The risk is that you may shrug off your own gift for words and ideas as ordinary, or let your attention drift away mid-task. The dispositor of Ketu is Mercury, which is also the lord of your current major period, Mercury. The skill is therefore being handed a whole chapter in which to be used consciously rather than taken for granted.

How the two ends speak to each other

- Rahu onto the 3rd house in Gemini, at full weight (1): the node of hunger looks straight at Ketu and at your mind. Big questions about meaning do not stay abstract for you. They live in your thoughts and conversations, and they can keep the mind busy late into the evening.
- Ketu onto the 9th house in Sagittarius, at full weight (1): the knower watches the seeker. This is a gift, because it lets you question the very teachers and doctrines you are drawn to, so that devotion does not become blind.
- Rahu onto the 1st house in Aries, at a weight of 0.5 : your sense of who you are is coloured by the search itself. You tend to define yourself partly through what you are exploring.
- Ketu onto the 7th house in Libra, at a weight of 0.5 : in partnership you need a companion who respects your inner space and your need to step back and think. This describes a need, not a problem.

- Ketu onto the 11th house in Aquarius, at a weight of 0.5 : you may drift away from groups once they lose their meaning for you. The friendships that last are the ones built on shared ideas.

The practical anchor for this whole axis is your chart ruler, Mars, placed in the 10th house in Capricorn. When the search for meaning is tied to real work and visible results, it stops floating and starts building.

Why this axis is lively now

You are in the major period of Mercury with the sub-period of Rahu. Because Mercury rules the sign Ketu occupies, both ends of the axis are switched on at once. This is a chapter in which study, a course, a teacher, travel, or questions of belief and family roots tend to gain traction, and in which the mind is especially active. Efforts to learn and to broaden your horizons land more easily now. What matters most is choosing depth over number: one path followed well rather than many sampled.

◆ ESSENCE

Rahu in the 9th house draws you toward a truth you have tested for yourself, and Ketu in the 3rd house gives you a quick, intuitive mind you can easily undervalue. The axis works best when the search is anchored in real study and the gift for words is used deliberately. The current sub-period of Rahu makes this especially alive.

✦ PRACTICE

Keep a simple weekly notebook: write down one idea or belief you are currently exploring, where it came from, and what you have actually tested of it. Commit to one teacher or course at a time for this sub-period.

⚠ NOTE

The pull between searching and detaching can leave the mind restless or scattered, especially in a busy period of Mercury. A fixed daily rhythm helps a great deal as a remedy: the same waking hour, a short walk, and ten quiet minutes of writing before screens. Choosing one path of study at a time also keeps curiosity from turning into overload.

A VEDIC READING

❖ 3.1 Health

A strong engine that thrives on rhythm and rest

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

Mercury: Pisces · 12th house

Saturn: Capricorn · 10th house

1st house: Aries

The deciding factor: your ascendant's ruler

Your physical vitality starts with your rising sign, Aries, in the nakshatra Ashwini. The planet that decides how that vitality behaves is its ruler, Mars. It sits in the 10th house, in Capricorn, where it is exalted, with a strength score of 74%. This gives you a robust, active constitution with real stamina and quick recovery. Your body wants to move, to act and to meet a challenge.

The same planet also rules the 8th house, the sign of Scorpio. So the planet of your vitality and the planet of your regenerative power are one and the same, and both are anchored in the 10th house, the area of work, duty and public life. Your health and your sense of purpose are closely linked. When your work feels meaningful you tend to feel physically strong. When it becomes nothing but pressure, your body is usually the first to tell you.

From its position, Mars turns its gaze back onto the 1st house, your Aries ascendant. Jupiter also looks there protectively, and Rahu adds a lighter glance. The ascendant itself holds no planet, so these influences shape it from a distance: drive from Mars, wisdom and resilience from Jupiter, and a restless wish for more from Rahu.

Fire meets endurance

Mars does not sit alone. It shares the 10th house with Saturn, which is in its own sign in Capricorn. Saturn has a strength score of 82%, among the highest in your chart. This pairing gives you remarkable endurance. You can keep going long after others stop. The other side of that gift is the main area of attention in your chart: a tendency to overwork, to hold tension quietly, and to postpone rest until the task is done.

That pattern shows up in where these planets look:

- Mars aspects the 4th house, in Cancer, and Saturn aspects the 4th house as well. This is the area of home and emotional ease. Stress from work can easily follow you home, so your home needs to be a place where you truly switch off.
- Saturn also aspects the 12th house, in Pisces, which governs sleep, rest and retreat. Your nights and your downtime need the same structure you give your work.
- Mars aspects the 5th house, in Leo. This is a healthy release valve. Creative play, sport and joyful activity burn off excess heat so it does not build up as tension.

Traditionally, Aries is linked with the head and Capricorn with the joints, knees and bones. These are best treated as areas to care for, not as problems. Watch for tension gathering in the head, jaw and shoulders. Protect your joints and posture with regular, sensible movement, especially during long working stretches.

Daily routine and the intuitive mind the 6th house, which governs daily routine, habits and recovery from strain, falls in Virgo. Its ruler Mercury sits in the 12th house, in Pisces, where it is debilitated. This dignity sits alongside a strength score of 77% , one of the stronger in your chart. Mercury also shares its sign with the Sun, forming the Budha-Aditya Yoga, and both look directly onto the 6th house. The result is a quietly intelligent approach to your own wellbeing. You notice patterns, you learn from how your body responds, and you do best with routines you have thought through.

Because this ruler lives in the area of rest and solitude, your health improves most through quiet. Good sleep, time away from screens and noise, and reflective habits such as journaling or meditation all help. Virgo traditionally points to regular meals and a steady daily rhythm as areas worth attention.

You are now in the period of Mercury, with Rahu as its current sub-period. This emphasises mental activity, communication and a busy mind. It is a good time to be generous with rest and careful with overstimulation. The aim is not to worry about it, just to give your thoughts somewhere calm to land at the end of the day.

Depth and resilience the 8th house is often misread. In your chart its ruler is exalted and well placed, which points to depth, psychological resilience and a real capacity for renewal. You tend to recover and rebuild after demanding phases, often coming back wiser. This is a strength to rely on, not something to fear.

Your elemental balance

Air leads your elemental mix at 33.3 %, while earth (22.2 %), fire (22.2 %) and water (22.2 %) are evenly spread behind it. Air gives you a quick, curious mind and plenty of nervous energy. It also means your wellbeing depends on grounding. Earth-type habits steady you: walking in nature, regular meals, working with your hands, and a consistent bedtime. Unhurried breathing practice suits the airy side of your nature and calms it.

This chart describes tendencies and areas to look after. It cannot diagnose anything. For any symptom or medical concern, please consult a qualified doctor, who can look at your actual health rather than a pattern in the sky.

◆ ESSENCE

Your vitality is strong and closely tied to meaningful work, because your ascendant's ruler sits powerfully alongside Saturn in the 10th house. Your health thrives when that drive is balanced by protected rest, a steady routine and grounding habits.

✿ PRACTICE

Set a fixed wind-down hour each evening, with no work and no screens, and add a short walk or gentle stretching. This gives the endurance of Saturn and the fire of Mars a daily point of release.

⚠ NOTE

The pairing of Mars and Saturn can push you to work through fatigue and carry tension into your home life and your sleep. The remedy is simple and effective: schedule rest as seriously as you schedule work, keep regular movement for your joints and posture, and see a qualified doctor for any persistent discomfort rather than pushing past it.

❖ 3.2 Wealth

Gains that grow through the people you trust and the work you build

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

Mercury: Pisces · 12th house

2nd house: Taurus

The deciding factor: where your wealth lord lives

The planet that rules your 2nd house is Venus. That part of the chart covers savings, family resources, speech and whatever you hold onto. Venus does not stay at home: it sits in the 11th house, in Aquarius. That is the field of income, friendships, networks and wishes fulfilled. When the lord of what you keep moves into the field of what you gain, the classical reading is clear. What you hold tends to come through whom you know. Your resources are woven into your circles: colleagues, friends, collaborators and communities of shared interest. They rarely arrive in isolation.

Venus stands at 6°35' of Aquarius, in Dhanishta, pada 4. This lunar mansion is traditionally linked with abundance, rhythm and shared celebration. Its placement here adds a steady, sociable quality to how resources gather around you. Venus is in a friendly sign with a strength of 68%. That is a comfortable, cooperative position, not a strained one. The tendency is towards earning well where you feel part of something: a team, a guild, a group whose values you share.

The benefactor looking at your gains

Jupiter is the strongest planet in your chart, with a strength of 100%. It sits in the 5th house, in Leo, the field of intelligence, learning, creativity and what you bring into being. From there it casts its full gaze onto the 11th house, onto the very sign Aquarius where your wealth lord lives. Venus returns the look onto the 5th house in Leo, where Jupiter sits. This mutual exchange between the field of gains and the field of intelligence is one of the most encouraging features of your chart for resources.

In plain terms, your gains tend to follow your knowledge. Teaching, advising, mentoring, creative work and anything where your understanding is valued can become real sources of support. Jupiter is retrograde, which turns its generosity somewhat inward. Its gifts often come through returning to something: revisiting a study, reconnecting with a mentor, refining a skill until it becomes unmistakably yours. The same Jupiter also looks at the 9th house and the 1st house. Wisdom, self-trust and the search for meaning are part of the same current that feeds your prosperity.

The lord of gains builds slowly and lastingly

Your 11th house falls in Aquarius. Its lord Saturn sits in the 10th house, in Capricorn, in its own sign, with a strength of 82%. This forms the Sasa Yoga. Beside it stands Mars, exalted, which forms the Ruchaka Yoga. Mars is your lagna lord Mars, so the lord of your self and the lord of your gains share the house of career. Together they make a genuine raja-yoga pairing.

For resources, this means one thing above all: income is closely tied to what you achieve in your working life. It is built through responsibility, reputation and consistency rather than windfalls. Saturn is also the dispositor of Venus, as Saturn shows. Your wealth lord therefore answers to the discipline of your career. The more steadily you build your professional standing, the more reliably your network and your gains respond. This is a slower path than some, but it is a durable one. What Saturn builds tends to stay built.

A lighter, half-strength glance from Ketu also touches the 11th house. It can bring a certain detachment towards gains: a tendency to undervalue what you have earned, or to feel that recognition matters less than the work itself. That modesty is admirable. It simply helps to notice it, so that you name your worth clearly when it counts.

Where resources naturally flow out the Sun and Mercury share the 12th house in Pisces, forming the Budha-Aditya Yoga. This field covers expenses, retreat, distant places and inner life. Resources here tend to flow towards learning, travel, quiet time, research and things of the spirit. That is spending on what nourishes you, not waste. Mercury is debilitated here, yet its strength of 77% places it among your stronger planets. Its intelligence is reflective and intuitive rather than calculating. Saturn casts its gaze onto the 12th house, which lends structure and restraint to this outflow. Both of these planets are hosted by Jupiter, the same benefactor that watches over your gains. What leaves your hands tends to return in another form: understanding, rest or perspective.

The present chapter

You are now in the Mercury Mahadasha, in its Rahu sub-period. Mercury lives in the 12th house, so this chapter can emphasise skills, analysis and communication. Some resources may be directed towards study, research or broadening your life. Rahu sits in the 9th house, which tends to widen horizons: unusual teachers, other cultures, new fields of learning. For your gains, this is a season for extending your network beyond familiar circles and letting your knowledge meet new audiences. The foundations laid now are the kind that Jupiter and Saturn later reward.

◆ ESSENCE

Your wealth lord Venus sits in the 11th house and is watched by the strong Jupiter, so resources tend to flow through friendship, knowledge and trusted networks. Saturn, the lord of gains, stands dignified in the 10th house, which ties lasting prosperity to patient, visible work.

✿ PRACTICE

Once a month, reach out to someone in your professional or learning circle to offer help, an introduction or shared knowledge, without asking for anything in return. With Venus in the 11th house under the gaze of Jupiter, this kind of reciprocity is exactly the current your gains move along.

⚠ NOTE

With the Sun and Mercury in the 12th house, and the Mercury period now running, spending on learning, travel or retreat can quietly grow larger than intended. A simple remedy works well: keep a plain monthly overview of where resources go, set aside a chosen portion for these nourishing purposes on purpose, and take any significant money decision to a qualified adviser rather than acting on inspiration alone.

❖ 3.3 Career

Where drive meets discipline, at the summit of your chart

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

Mercury: Pisces · 12th house

10th house: Capricorn

The deciding factor: a powerful, crowded summit

Your 10th house falls in Capricorn, and its ruler, Saturn, lives right there in its own sign, at 82% of its full strength. Beside it sits Mars, the ruler of your Aries ascendant, exalted in Capricorn and at 74% strength. When the planet that stands for you settles in the house of work and public standing, identity and vocation tend to fuse. You are likely to feel most like yourself when you carry responsibility that matters and can see what your effort has built. Work with no visible outcome is likely to leave you restless.

Great-person yogas in your house of work

This single placement creates Ruchaka Yoga and Sasa Yoga, both of them Mahapurusha yogas. Ruchaka forms because Mars is exalted in an angle of the chart. Sasa forms because Saturn holds its own sign in an angle.

- Ruchaka lends courage, initiative and the ability to act decisively under pressure. It suits you to leadership, strategy, engineering, management, and any role where someone has to take charge.
- Sasa lends staying power and a feel for systems, institutions and long projects. It gives you the patience to build something that outlasts a season.

On top of this, the ruler of your self (Mars) and the ruler of your career (Saturn) join in the same sign. This is a classic raja-yoga pairing, and it points toward authority earned through competence. The same planet of discipline also governs your gains, so recognition tends to translate, over time, into wider circles and tangible reward.

A yoga is a promise rather than a possession. These combinations speak most clearly in the periods and sub-periods ruled by Mars or Saturn. The rest of the time they are present as a steady capacity you can draw on whenever you choose to step forward.

Speed learning endurance

The conjunction has an inner tension. Mars wants results now, while Saturn wants them done properly. When the two cooperate, you move fast and build to last. When they pull against each other, you may push hard, then feel blocked, then push harder. The work of this pairing is pacing: letting urgency serve the long plan instead of burning through it.

Their aspects show where this energy spills over:

- Mars looks back at your 1st house, which keeps ambition personal. Your career is never just a job to you.
- Both Mars and Saturn cast their gaze onto your 4th house, the house of home and inner peace. Work can easily follow you home unless you set boundaries on purpose.
- Saturn also looks at your 12th house, the house of rest and retreat, and at your 7th house, the house of partnership. Rest needs structure, and a partner who respects your commitments matters.

As the natural significator of work and duty, Saturn is sturdy here. Seen through your chart, your karma means reliability, earned trust and slow-built authority rather than quick fame.

Your career chart

The dashamsha, the divisional chart for profession, rises in Taurus. Mars, your birth-chart ascendant ruler, stands in its 1st house in Taurus. The message repeats itself: your professional identity is active and self-directed, and the Taurus rising adds a taste for steady, tangible, value-building work. The summit of the career chart holds no planet, so its tone is carried by that rising sign and its strong occupant.

Other placements in this chart shape the path:

- Saturn sits in the career chart's the 11th house in Pisces, together with the Moon in its 11th house. Career fruits tend to come through colleagues, networks and communities you belong to.
- Sun stands in its 7th house in Scorpio. You work well through partnerships, clients and direct dealings with the public.
- Jupiter in its 8th house in Sagittarius favours research, depth, and the handling of complex or shared matters.
- Mercury, Venus and Rahu gather in its 12th house. Much of your best work may happen behind the scenes: in research, planning, institutions or foreign settings, rather than on a loud stage.

The quiet intelligence behind the work

In your birth chart, the Sun and Mercury share Pisces in your 12th house, forming Budha-Aditya Yoga. Mercury is debilitated here, yet it carries 77% strength, one of the sturdier scores in your chart. This is not a weak mind. It is an intuitive, reflective and imaginative one that does its sharpest thinking in quiet: strategising, writing, researching, or working across cultures. Both planets look at your 6th house, which gives a practical gift for daily problem-solving and service.

Venus, placed in Aquarius in your 11th house, takes its direction from Saturn, the ruler of your career. Friendships and professional networks therefore feed straight into your working life.

The current chapter

At 34, you are in the Mercury period, now in its Rahu sub-period. The emphasis falls on skills, analysis, communication and service, while Rahu adds a pull toward wider horizons, unusual learning and broader perspectives. This is a good season to sharpen expertise, write, teach or retrain. The ground you prepare now is what the great yogas of your 10th house build on when their own periods arrive.

In practice, your chart leans toward roles that combine responsibility with independent thinking: management, administration, engineering or technical leadership, strategic planning, consulting, research, and work inside structured institutions. These are tendencies to explore, and the choice of path remains yours.

◆ ESSENCE

Your career house is the powerhouse of your chart. The ruler of your self, Mars, is exalted there, and Saturn holds its own sign beside it, forming great-person yogas of courage and endurance. Your path is to let drive and discipline work together, building authority slowly, visibly and on solid ground.

✿ PRACTICE

Once a week, set aside a fixed, protected block of time for home and rest. Treat it as seriously as a work meeting, and use a few minutes of it to review your long-term projects in writing.

⚠ NOTE

With Mars and Saturn both aspecting your 4th house, ambition can quietly crowd out rest and home life, leaving you feeling tense or depleted. The remedy is structure rather than restraint: firm end-of-day boundaries, regular unhurried time at home, and paced rather than sprinted goals. If tension or fatigue persists, please consult a qualified doctor.

❖ 3.4 Talents

A teacher's wisdom in the 5th house, an imaginative mind in the 12th house

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

4th house: Cancer

Your talents are anchored by one clear factor. Jupiter, the planet of wisdom, teaching and understanding, sits in your 5th house in Leo. That is the area of intelligence, creativity, study and what you bring into the world. With a strength rating of 100%, it is the strongest planet in your chart, and it rests in the sign of a friend. Its gifts tend to arrive naturally rather than through strain. Learning, explaining and inspiring others are close to the centre of who you are.

The teacher in you

Jupiter in Leo gives a warm, generous kind of intelligence. It likes to understand the big picture and then share it. It falls in Purva Phalguni, which adds pleasure in creating, a feel for beauty, and a love of learning that is enjoyable rather than dutiful. Jupiter is also retrograde. This inclines you to learn by returning to things: re-reading, revising, reconsidering. Your knowledge deepens with each pass instead of being skimmed once and left behind. You may find that subjects you set aside years ago come back later with far more meaning.

From your 5th house, Jupiter looks toward three areas:

- your 9th house, the field of higher learning, philosophy and teachers, which strengthens a lifelong pull toward meaningful study;
- your 11th house, friends, networks and community, which suggests your knowledge spreads well through groups, circles and shared projects;
- your 1st house, yourself, so that what you learn becomes part of your identity and the way others see you.

Other planets also colour your creativity. Venus casts its gaze on your 5th house, which brings aesthetic taste and a sense of harmony to whatever you make. Mars also aspects your 5th house, adding drive, competitive spirit and the energy to finish creative work. Rahu touches it more lightly, as 0.5 strength suggests, and this draws your curiosity toward unusual, foreign or unconventional subjects.

Where your creativity is fed

The lord of your 5th house is the Sun, and it sits in your 12th house in Pisces. This is a meaningful detail. Your creative fire is lit in quiet, reflective places: solitude, imagination, reading, time away from noise. You may notice that ideas arrive when you are alone, travelling, or resting rather than when you are performing. Protecting that inner space is part of looking after your talent.

The quiet, imaginative mind the Sun and Mercury sit together in your 12th house in Pisces, forming the Budha-Aditya Yoga, a union of clear purpose with a capable, articulate intellect. Mercury is debilitated in Pisces, and it would be easy to misread that. Its strength rating is 77% , among the highest in your chart. What the dignity describes is a style of thinking, not a lack of ability. Your mind works by intuition, images and connections. It synthesises rather than lists. It is well suited to research, writing, study done in quiet, foreign languages or settings, and anything that asks you to sense the pattern beneath the details. Rigid, rote or noisy environments cost you more effort, and that is a matter of fit, not capacity. Mercury sits in Revati, a gentle, imaginative placement that supports this reflective intelligence.

Both the Sun and Mercury aspect your 6th house. Your thinking readily turns toward solving problems, improving systems and being of practical service. This makes you useful in analysis, in careful work and in helping others through difficulties.

The emotional ground for learning

Your 4th house in Cancer, the realm of inner peace, the home and the heart's education, is ruled by the Moon. It sits in your 3rd house in Gemini, in Punarvasu. You learn best through conversation, writing, short courses, exchanges of ideas and hands-on experiment. Your emotional steadiness and your curiosity are closely linked: when the mind has something to express, the heart settles.

Mars aspects your 4th house, and Saturn aspects your 4th house. This brings some pressure into your inner space: a sense that study must be productive and that rest must be earned. You tend to learn best within clear structure, and you learn better still when that structure includes genuine pauses. A calm, dedicated place to study or create does more for you than it might for others.

Your talents in the present chapter

You are in the long period of Mercury, with the sub-period of Rahu now running. These years highlight skills, analysis and communication, and Rahu, placed in your 9th house, turns your curiosity toward unusual teachings, philosophies and horizons beyond the familiar. This is fertile ground for a new course of study, a writing project, or a subject you have long been drawn to. Efforts to learn and to share what you know tend to find traction now.

◆ ESSENCE

Jupiter in your 5th house is the strongest planet in your chart, which makes learning, teaching and creativity your most reliable gifts. The Budha-Aditya Yoga in your 12th house adds an intuitive, reflective intelligence that flourishes in quiet, research and writing.

✻ PRACTICE

Set aside a fixed, quiet hour on several days of the week for one chosen subject. Read, write, and then explain what you learned to someone else. Teaching it back is how your Jupiter turns knowledge into wisdom.

⚠ NOTE

With Mercury debilitated in Pisces and the Moon in airy Gemini, attention can scatter across too many interests at once. A gentle remedy: keep one notebook for ideas, finish one project before opening the next, and offer small acts of service to students or learners. This is a traditional way of steadying Mercury.

❖ 3.5 Love

Love that begins as friendship and deepens with time

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

7th house: Libra

The house of partnership

The factor that shapes your love life most is the position of the planet that rules marriage. Your 7th house falls in Libra and holds no planets. An empty house is not an empty area of life. It means the story is told by its lord and by the planets that look at it. That lord is Venus, and it sits in your 11th house, in Aquarius: the planet of marriage lives in the house of friendship, community, shared ideals and wishes fulfilled.

This points to a clear pattern. Love for you tends to grow out of companionship. A bond that begins as friendship, or through a circle of people, a shared cause or a common interest, is the path this chart favours. You are likely to value a partner who is also a real friend, someone you can talk with about ideas, plans and the wider world, and not only about feelings.

In your chart Venus sits in Dhanishta, and its dispositor is Saturn. This gives your affection a loyal, steady and somewhat reserved quality. You tend to show love through consistency and by being there when it counts, more than through grand declarations. With a strength of 68%, this planet is well placed to deliver what it promises.

From there, Venus looks across to your 5th house in Leo, the area of romance, play and creative joy. Mars also turns its gaze onto the same 5th house. Your house of romance therefore receives both of the classic planets of attraction. This suggests a warm, lively romantic nature that enjoys courtship and flourishes when a couple creates, plays and celebrates together.

The significator of the husband

In a woman's chart, Jyotish also reads Jupiter as the natural significator of the husband and of the qualities you look for in a life partner. Here it is the strongest planet in your whole chart. It sits in your 5th house, in Leo, retrograde, with a strength of 100%. It is also vargottama: in the navamsa, the chart of marriage and inner maturity, it stays in Leo. That doubles its reliability.

In practical terms, the qualities you value in a partner are strongly supported: wisdom, generosity, integrity, humour and a protective, teacherly warmth. The retrograde motion adds a reflective note. You tend to hold a very personal inner picture of what a good partnership is, and you may weigh a commitment carefully before making it. That is discernment, not hesitation.

Importantly, Jupiter also aspects your 11th house in Aquarius. It blesses the very place where the lord of your partnerships sits. The strongest planet in the chart protecting the ruler of marriage is one of the most encouraging signatures in this section. Jupiter also looks at your 1st house, which supports a sense of self that stays generous and intact within a relationship.

Saturn's gaze: a bond earned and kept

Saturn casts its special long-reaching aspect onto your 7th house in Libra. This planet asks for seriousness, reliability and time. You are not built for shallow or hurried commitments. The bonds that suit you ripen gradually, are tested by real life, and become stronger for it. A partner who is mature, dependable and ready to build something lasting is the one this placement favours. Once committed, loyalty tends to run deep on both sides.

Ketu adds a lighter, partial glance of 0.5 strength to the same 7th house. This brings a quiet need for personal space and a spiritual dimension in partnership. It works best when both people respect each other's independence and inner world.

The navamsa: the inner marriage

Your navamsa rises in Taurus, and in it Venus sits in the 7th house, in Scorpio. The planet of love sits in the house of marriage within the chart of marriage itself. This speaks of emotional depth, intensity and loyalty. For you, intimacy is about trust and real closeness rather than surface charm, and a partnership tends to become a place of shared transformation over the years.

The Darakaraka of your chart, the planet that describes the spouse, is the Sun, placed in your 12th house, in Pisces. In the navamsa it moves to Cancer, in the 3rd house. This suggests you may be drawn to a partner with a quieter, reflective or spiritually inclined side. The relationship also tends to thrive on private, unhurried time together: retreats, travel, conversations away from the noise.

Your Atmakaraka, the Moon, sits in Gemini. Emotionally you need a partner you can talk with easily and often. Words and shared curiosity are part of how you feel close.

Mangal dosha, calmly

The manglik factor is present in your chart, with a severity of mild. It is counted from your Moon, with only a secondary note from Venus. It is also cancelled by the chart itself. Mars sits together with Saturn in the 10th house, which steadies its fire. Mars is also your lagna lord, the ruler of your Aries ascendant, and a lagna lord does not work against its own chart. On top of this it is exalted in Capricorn. The separate kalathra dosha is absent.

In everyday terms, this simply describes a direct, energetic and decisive way of relating. It is an asset in partnership when it goes into shared goals and honest conversation. It is not a sign of trouble in marriage.

◆ ESSENCE

Your Venus rules partnership from the 11th house, blessed by Jupiter, the strongest planet in your chart: love tends to grow out of friendship and deepen with time. Saturn on your 7th house asks for maturity and loyalty, and the manglik factor is mild and cancelled.

✿ PRACTICE

Keep one shared, unhurried ritual each week with a partner or, if you are single, with close friends: a walk, a class, or a cause you both care about. Your chart's love grows through companionship and steady time.

⚠ NOTE

The manglik factor is present but mild and cancelled, so it is no obstacle. The only practical note is that the energy of Mars can make you quick to decide in heated moments. Give important conversations a pause before you answer. Regular physical activity is a good outlet for that fire, and a small act of service or charity on Tuesdays is a gentle traditional support. When a serious partnership is being considered, a traditional comparison of both charts can give extra reassurance.

❖ 3.6 Family

Where a strong Jupiter blesses what you create, and home is built with intention

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

2nd house: Taurus

The deciding factor: Jupiter in your 5th house

One placement anchors your family story. Jupiter sits in your 5th house, the part of the chart that speaks of children, creativity, learning and whatever you bring into being. It is in Leo, a sign where it feels at ease. It carries the highest strength rating in your chart, 100%. It is also your Putrakaraka, the natural significator of children, and the lord of your 9th house, the area of blessings, teachers and the father.

When the planet of wisdom holds this much weight in the house of offspring, it points to a deep and reliable warmth toward the young. That can mean your own children if and when they come, and it equally means students, protégés and the creative work you nurture. Because Jupiter is retrograde, this generosity tends to be reflective. You revisit, reconsider and give thoughtfully rather than impulsively.

Other planets add colour here:

- Venus looks at this area from your 11th house, bringing affection and a love of beauty.
- Mars adds energy and a protective instinct.
- Rahu offers a lighter, partial touch of the unconventional.

The lord of this area, the Sun, rests in your 12th house, in Pisces. Some of your deepest joy in creating and nurturing is likely to unfold quietly, privately, or at some distance from where you began.

Roots and home: your 4th house

Your 4th house falls in Cancer. Its lord, the Moon, sits in your 3rd house, in Gemini, together with Ketu. Mars and Saturn both cast their gaze on this area from your 10th house, where they share a sign. Read together, home tends to be something you build with intention rather than a place you simply fall back into. The drive and responsibility of your working life press on your private life, so your sense of rest needs defending.

This describes a condition to work with. A protected corner, a steady routine and a few people who truly know you can turn this pressure into real grounding.

Your mother and your inner world the Moon is the classical significator of the mother. In your chart it is also your Atmakaraka, the planet of the soul's central lesson. So the bond with your mother, and with mothering in general, is more than a background fact. It is one of the places where you learn emotional steadiness.

Your Moon is placed in Punarvasu, the nakshatra of the returning light. It carries a theme of coming home again and again and renewing ties after distance. Its closeness to Ketu lends the bond an intuitive, sometimes quiet quality, where understanding may arrive without many words.

Mercury is your Matrukaraka, a second significator of the mother. It is also the lord of your current major period, Mercury, so family conversations and practical care around home naturally come to the foreground in these years.

The family voice: your 2nd house

Your 2nd house, in Taurus, speaks of the family you grew up in, of speech and of shared resources. Its lord, Venus, sits in your 11th house, in Aquarius, and receives the gaze of Jupiter. For you, family tends to widen into community. Friends can become kin, and the warmth of a household often flows through networks and chosen companions. Venus is also your Gnatikaraka, the significator of relatives, which shows how much your extended circle shapes your sense of belonging.

Father and lineage

the Sun, the natural significator of the father, sits in your 12th house, in Pisces, in the nakshatra Purva Bhadrapada. This leans toward a father bond with a reflective, spiritual or somewhat distant tone.

Your 9th house, in Sagittarius, holds Rahu. Its lord, Jupiter, rests in your strong 5th house and looks back at it, and the Moon also turns its gaze there. Taken together, lineage is less a burden than a search. It draws you toward unusual teachers, wider horizons and the question of where you come from. With your current sub-period of Rahu running, these questions may feel especially alive. This is a good time for conversations with elders, for family history and for remembrance.

The chart of children and creation

In the finer chart for children, the rising sign is Aries. Its ruler, Mars, sits in the 9th house, in Sagittarius, together with the Moon and Mercury. That is a supportive and fortunate position.

Jupiter and Saturn share the 8th house, in Scorpio. Here blessings tend to deepen with patience and time rather than arrive in a rush. Ketu in the 5th house suggests that nurturing may take less conventional forms, such as mentoring, teaching or creative guardianship alongside family life.

These are tendencies. They make no promise about number or timing, and the choices remain entirely yours.

◆ ESSENCE

Your strongest planet, Jupiter, guards your 5th house, so creating, teaching and caring for the young are a deep, reliable resource. Home and rest, shown by your 4th house, are pressed by a busy working life and flourish when you protect them on purpose.

✿ PRACTICE

Set aside a regular quiet moment of family remembrance. Light a lamp, share a simple meal, or reach out to a family elder, and honour both the mother-line and the father-line in the same gesture.

⚠ NOTE

Because Mars and Saturn both look at your 4th house, work and responsibility can crowd out rest and home life. The remedy is simple structure: keep a fixed evening rhythm, one space in your home free of work, and a standing time for the people closest to you. That turns this pressure into a stable foundation.

❖ 3.7 Dharma

A strong teacher within, an unconventional road without

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

Mercury: Pisces · 12th house

9th house: Sagittarius

The deciding factor: the lord of faith lives in the house of joy

Your 9th house, the part of the chart that speaks of belief, teachers, higher learning and the long search for meaning, falls in Sagittarius. Its lord, Jupiter, sits in your 5th house, in Leo, at 14°06', in the nakshatra Purva Phalguni. This single fact shapes your whole spiritual life. For you, faith is not a duty you inherit and carry. It lives where creativity, study, play and the joy of guiding others live. You come closest to what you believe when you are learning something with delight, teaching it, or making something from it.

This is also the strongest planet in your chart. Its strength stands at 100%, so this is a reliable, lifelong resource rather than a passing interest. Jupiter is retrograde, which turns its wisdom inward. You are unlikely to accept a teaching simply because it is handed to you. You tend to test it, question it and return to it until it becomes your own. What looks like slowness to believe is really the making of a sincere, lived understanding.

The same planet, Jupiter, also rules your 12th house in Pisces. That is the area of retreat, sleep, prayer, solitude and letting go. So one planet holds both keys: the outward search for truth and the inward surrender that makes truth restful. From its seat, Jupiter looks back onto the 9th house and protects it, Jupiter looks onto the 1st house and colours your whole personality with a teacher's instinct, and Jupiter blesses the 11th house, the friendships and communities through which much of your growth arrives.

An unconventional road

Rahu sits in your 9th house, in Sagittarius, in the nakshatra Mula. It draws you toward unusual teachers, philosophies from outside the tradition you were born into, travel that changes you, and questions about the father-line and what you have inherited from it. The hunger here is real, and it can make you restless: always one more teacher, one more system, one more book.

That restlessness is well held. Rahu receives the gaze of your strongest planet, and also the gaze of your Moon. The appetite for the unfamiliar is guided by wisdom and felt through the heart, so it tends to lead somewhere meaningful rather than scatter you. Your task is discernment. Take in widely, then choose a few sources and go deep with them.

An intuitive, quiet inner life

Ketu sits in the 3rd house, in Gemini, in the nakshatra Ardra, right beside your Moon. This gives you an intuitive mind. Insight often arrives before reasons do, and you can step back from a situation and see it whole. It also means you need regular quiet, because a busy mind in this sign can drift or feel disconnected when it has no outlet. Your mind settles through structure: writing, honest conversation, a daily practice done at the same time. Ketu also turns its gaze onto the 9th house, which adds a quiet detachment to your beliefs. You hold them sincerely but not rigidly, and that is a mature way to hold faith.

Your birth nakshatra is Punarvasu. It is traditionally linked with renewal and with the light returning home. Together with a birth on a lunar day that tradition sets aside for fasting and prayer, it suggests a spirituality of coming back again and again, rather than a single dramatic conversion.

The quiet room

the Sun and Mercury share your 12th house in Pisces and form the Budha-Aditya Yoga, the union of intelligence and inner light. Here it works behind the scenes: reflective thinking, meditation, dreams, research and time in foreign or secluded places. Mercury is debilitated in this sign, yet its strength is 77% , among the highest in your chart. Your mind is not weak. It is imaginative and intuitive, and it thinks best in stillness rather than in noise.

Saturn casts its gaze onto the 12th house. Rest and retreat do not look after themselves in your chart. They need to be scheduled and protected like any other commitment. When you guard them, this becomes a real sanctuary.

The chapter you are in now

You are in the Mercury Mahadasha, the major life period, and its Rahu sub-period has begun. Mercury sits in your 12th house and Rahu in your 9th house, so both rooms of the inner life are now active. Study, pilgrimage, contact with foreign teachings and a serious look at your beliefs tend to find traction now, and efforts in these directions land more easily. Keep your discernment close. Try a practice for a season before committing to it, and let your strongest planet's steady wisdom be the filter.

◆ ESSENCE

Your faith lives where joy, learning and teaching live, anchored by Jupiter, the strongest planet in your chart, sitting in your 5th house. An unconventional search through Rahu in the 9th house and an intuitive inner life through Ketu beside your Moon become wisdom when you give them depth and quiet.

✻ PRACTICE

Set aside a fixed daily quiet time for one practice you have chosen, such as reading a teaching, journaling or silent sitting. Keep one day a week for study or service offered to others, since your wisdom grows most when you share it.

⚠ NOTE

With Rahu in the 9th house and the current Rahu sub-period active, it is easy to chase one teacher or system after another and feel unsettled. The remedy is simple and steady: choose a few trusted sources, stay with them for a full season, and ground each insight in writing or conversation before moving on.

❖ 3.8 Abroad

Small journeys that open onto wide horizons

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mercury: Pisces · 12th house

3rd house: Gemini

The deciding link: Mercury in the 12th house

One link in your chart shapes life beyond your birthplace more than any other. Mercury rules the 3rd house, the area of short journeys, movement, siblings and your own voice. It sits in the 12th house, in Pisces, the part of the chart that speaks of distant places, retreat and foreign soil.

When the ruler of everyday travel settles in the house of the far-off, modest moves tend to grow into larger ones. A course, a conversation or a short trip can quietly open a door to studying, working or living in another country. This link is active now: the main chapter of your life belongs to Mercury, with Rahu running beneath it.

On paper Mercury is debilitated in Pisces. It still holds a strength score of 77%, one of the stronger ratings in your chart. It also shares the 12th house with the Sun. The result is a mind that travels well inwardly: reflective, imaginative and at ease in quiet or unfamiliar surroundings. Foreign settings, research, retreats and cross-cultural work suit it better than loud display.

Houses of distance in changeable signs

All of your travel houses fall in flexible, dual signs:

- 3rd house in Gemini
- 9th house in Sagittarius
- 12th house in Pisces

These signs adapt, move back and forth and hold more than one thing at once. So the chart leans less toward a single dramatic emigration and more toward repeated movement. That can mean more than one base, returning to places that matter, or a life that joins two cultures. This is a tendency, not a verdict, and it leaves plenty of room for your own choices.

Your rising sign is Aries, a sign of initiative. Its ruler, Mars, sits in the 10th house, in Capricorn. Movement in your life tends to serve purpose. Travel rarely feels like escape for you. It works best when it is tied to work, responsibility or a visible goal.

Rahu in the 9th house: an unconventional horizon

Rahu sits in the 9th house, in Sagittarius, in Mula. It draws you toward foreign philosophies, teachers from other traditions, long journeys taken for learning, and ideas your family may not have grown up with. The chart marks it as debilitated. In plain terms, the appetite for the unfamiliar can sometimes run ahead of a clear sense of direction.

That is why its protectors matter. Jupiter casts its gaze on the 9th house, the Moon looks across at the 9th house, and Ketu also aspects the 9th house. Wisdom, feeling and detachment all watch over this search, which keeps it from becoming mere restlessness.

The sub-period of Rahu is now running. During it, themes of distant travel, higher study and contact with other cultures are likely to come forward more easily than before.

Jupiter: the ruler of both far houses

Jupiter rules both the 9th house and the 12th house, and it sits in the 5th house, in Leo, with a strength score of 100%. That makes it the most reliable resource in your chart. Foreign connections tend to flourish through learning, teaching, mentoring, creative work and the young people or students you guide.

It is retrograde, which adds a pattern of revisiting. You may return to a country, a language or a teacher more than once, and find more there each time. Its gaze on the 1st house lends your sense of self a steady, generous centre wherever you are.

Home base and the moving mind the Moon sits with Ketu in the 3rd house, in Gemini, and Rahu aspects the 3rd house. Your mind loves motion, new impressions and quick adaptation. Yet uprooting can leave it slightly unmoored, and it settles best when some part of daily life stays constant wherever you are.

◆ ESSENCE

Your chart ties everyday movement to distant places: the ruler of short journeys sits in the house of foreign lands, and the current chapter activates that link. The pull abroad is real and runs through learning, teaching and purposeful work, and it tends to take the form of repeated movement rather than one final departure.

✻ PRACTICE

Before any larger move, try a trial run. A course, a working stay or a few weeks abroad lets you test whether a place supports both your work and your inner quiet before you commit.

⚠ NOTE

With the Moon and Ketu together and Rahu stirring the far horizon, frequent travel can bring mental restlessness and unsettled sleep. The remedy is simple and effective: carry a fixed daily routine with you, such as the same morning ritual, a journaling habit or a regular rest hour. If sleep or tension becomes a real concern, consult a qualified doctor.

Yogas and Doshas

A VEDIC READING

❖ 4.1 Yogas

Two great yogas in one sign, and a quiet intelligence behind them

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

Mercury: Pisces · 12th house

The deciding factor: a doubled Mahapurusha in your 10th house

The yogas in your chart are led by one striking cluster. Mars and Saturn sit together in Capricorn, in your 10th house, and each holds full dignity there. Mars is exalted at 25°33' in Dhanishta. Saturn is in its own sign at 20°31' in Shravana. Two of the five great Mahapurusha yogas, the classical yogas of the great person, form here from a single sign, and that sign is also the ground of your working life and public standing. Everything else in this section is best read against this centre of gravity.

1. Ruchaka Yoga: the courage to act

Who forms it: Mars, the ruler of your Aries ascendant, stands exalted in an angular house.

What it promises: initiative and physical and mental energy, together with the nerve to lead when others hesitate. Because the planet forming it is your own chart ruler, this is personal. Your sense of who you are is closely tied to what you set in motion and finish.

How it plays out: from the 10th house, Mars turns its gaze back onto the 1st house, your self and body, and also onto the 4th house and the 5th house. You tend to feel most like yourself when you are building something visible. Your inner life and creative projects receive a steady push toward action, not only reflection. Its strength score of 74% shows that this promise has real means behind it.

2. Sasa Yoga: authority that is earned

Who forms it: Saturn, in its own sign within the same angular house.

What it promises: patience and organisation, a talent for responsibility, and the ability to build structures that outlast the first burst of enthusiasm. Respect from this yoga usually grows slowly and then holds.

How it plays out: Saturn carries the highest strength score of the planets named here at 82%. It makes endurance the backbone of your ambition. It looks onto the 7th house in Libra, where it favours bonds built on reliability and time. It also looks onto the 4th house, and onto the 12th house, the house of rest and retreat, which asks you to protect your quiet hours.

3. The Raja Yoga pairing: self joined to career and gains

When the ruler of the ascendant meets the ruler of the career house, classical Jyotish calls it a Raja Yoga, a combination for rising. Here Mars rules the 1st house as well as the house of depth and transformation. Saturn governs the 10th house and the 11th house, the houses of career and of gains and networks. Their union in the 10th house links your identity directly to your vocation and to what your efforts return to you.

This pairing is also the chart's central lesson: speed learning endurance, and caution learning courage. When the two cooperate, with Mars starting and Saturn sustaining, the result tends to be lasting work rather than bursts that fade.

When it activates: a yoga is a promise that delivers most fully in the periods of the planets that form it. At present you are in the major period of Mercury, with a sub-period of Rahu. During this time the two Mahapurusha yogas work as a steady foundation beneath you rather than as the headline. They come forward most strongly whenever a period of Mars or Saturn is running.

4. Budha-Aditya Yoga: the quiet intelligence

Who forms it: the Sun at 0°10' and Mercury at 17°01', together in Pisces, in your 12th house.

What it promises: a bright, discerning mind that joins understanding with the confidence to express it.

How it plays out: placed in the 12th house, this yoga works best behind the scenes. It suits research, reflection, writing and imaginative problem-solving, and it does well in foreign or secluded settings more than in loud display. Mercury is debilitated in Pisces. That means its logic is less linear and more intuitive, pattern-sensing and empathetic. It does not mean a weaker mind. Its strength score of 77% is actually higher than that of Mars. Both planets cast their gaze onto the 6th house in Virgo, which gives a practical edge for analysis, service and untangling everyday problems.

This is the yoga most directly awake right now. Mercury rules your current major period, so these years especially reward skill-building, careful thinking and thoughtful communication.

5. Vosi and Ubhayachara Yogas: supporting notes

These two solar yogas are minor. They add colour rather than direction. Vosi forms because Venus sits in the sign just behind the Sun, in Aquarius in your 11th house. It traditionally points to diligence and resourcefulness, and to a generous, fair-minded way of working. Here it links your effort to friendships, communities and networks. Ubhayachara, as it appears in your chart, simply reinforces that same Venus theme: support that tends to arrive through the people around you.

How the yogas fit together

Your yogas describe two layers. The outer layer is a commanding, disciplined drive toward achievement in the 10th house. The inner layer is a reflective, intuitive intelligence working quietly from the 12th house. The first builds your standing. The second gives that standing depth and keeps it honest. Your strongest results tend to come when neither layer is sacrificed to the other.

◆ ESSENCE

Two Mahapurusha yogas, formed by Mars and Saturn together in Capricorn in your 10th house, make disciplined action and earned authority the chart's backbone. The Budha-Aditya Yoga in the 12th house adds a quiet, intuitive intelligence that is especially awake during the current period of Mercury.

✻ PRACTICE

To support the Budha-Aditya Yoga during this period of Mercury, choose a simple act of regular service connected to learning, such as donating books, tutoring someone, or helping a young person with their studies. Pair it with a short weekly session of writing or planning, so your intuitive thinking gets a structured outlet.

⚠ NOTE

The same Mars and Saturn that form your strongest yogas both cast their gaze onto the 4th house, and Saturn also looks onto the 12th house. Ambition can therefore quietly take time from home, sleep and rest. The remedy is to protect a few non-negotiable evenings and a regular wind-down routine, and to treat rest as part of the work. If tension or tiredness starts to show in your body, a qualified doctor is the right person to consult.

❖ 4.2 Doshas

What is present, what is cancelled, and what is simply clear

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

Saturn: Capricorn · 10th house

The deciding factor in this part of your chart is where your ascendant lord sits. Mars, the planet that rules your rising sign and stands for your own body, will and vitality, rests in the 10th house, in Capricorn, at 25°33', with the dignity exalted. Right beside it sits Saturn, in Capricorn, as own sign. This pairing carries most of the weight in this section, because it is the very thing that softens the dosha people tend to worry about most.

The Manglik dosha: gentle, and cancelled

The Manglik dosha is marked present, with a severity of mild. It is counted from your Moon, which stands in Gemini in the 3rd house, rather than from your ascendant. A secondary echo appears when the chart is read from the planet of relationships.

Your chart itself lists the reasons this dosha is cancelled:

- Mars is joined by Saturn. Classical reasoning treats this association as steadying. The fire is placed inside a frame of patience, structure and responsibility.
- Mars is your own ascendant lord. The planet said to create the dosha is also the planet that guards your whole chart, so its energy works on your behalf.
- It is exalted in Capricorn, a sign where it acts at its most disciplined and constructive.

In plain terms, the Manglik label here does not predict conflict or trouble in partnership. It describes temperament: directness, a strong drive, and a preference for action over waiting. In a close relationship this asks for a partner who respects your energy. It also asks you to build the habit of pausing before you answer in the heat of the moment. Much of this fiery energy is already absorbed by your working life, since it lives in the 10th house, the area of career, reputation and public contribution. When that area is well used, less pressure spills into home and love.

Kala Sarpa and Sade Sati: both clear

Kala Sarpa is absent. Your planets are not hemmed in between the nodes, and your chart moves freely rather than in a pattern of sudden reversals.

Sade Sati is absent at this moment, so you are not in Sade Sati now. The slow transit of Saturn currently falls on a career-facing point counted from your Moon. That means heavier responsibility and a fuller workload in your professional life, not a personal trial. It calls for pacing and good boundaries around rest, not for worry.

Other checks that come out clear

Several combinations that astrologers routinely examine are absent from your chart. Kalathra dosha is absent, Shrapit dosha is absent, Guru-Chandala is absent, and Ganda Moola is absent. Your chart is free of these.

Pitru dosha: an invitation to remember

Pitru dosha is present. It is best understood as a call to honour the father-line and the ancestors, not as a curse or a burden. The theme of lineage, teachers and inherited wisdom is already alive in your chart. Rahu stands in the 9th house, in Sagittarius, the area of the father, of mentors and of higher meaning. Your Moon also turns its gaze onto that same 9th house. So questions of where you come from, and what you carry forward, naturally matter to you. The response is simple and warm: remembrance, gratitude, and generosity offered in their name. Done sincerely, this becomes a source of quiet support rather than weight.

Ghata dosha

Ghata dosha is present. It is a minor traditional marker. It does not override the strengths described above and needs no special concern. The same steady practices that support the rest of this section are enough to hold it.

The larger picture

None of these factors is a verdict on your life. The strongest statement your chart makes here is that the planet which could have caused friction is exalted, well accompanied, and working for you. What remains is an invitation to channel drive wisely and to honour your roots with care.

◆ ESSENCE

The Manglik dosha in your chart is mild and cancelled, above all because Mars is your own ascendant lord, exalted, and joined by Saturn in the 10th house. Kala Sarpa and Sade Sati are both clear right now. Pitru dosha is simply an invitation to honour your lineage.

✻ PRACTICE

Give your drive a regular physical outlet, such as brisk walking, running or a strength practice, ideally on Tuesdays. Pair it with a deliberate pause before answering in anger, so the energy of Mars builds rather than burns.

⚠ NOTE

Two present doshas deserve gentle, steady attention. For the Manglik dosha, which is mild and cancelled, a simple devotional practice to Hanuman on Tuesdays, regular vigorous exercise, and patience in heated conversations keep this fiery energy constructive. For Pitru dosha, light a lamp or offer water in remembrance of your ancestors on amavasya or during Pitru Paksha. Donating food to those in need in their name is also traditional. If you wish to perform a formal ancestral ritual, consult a qualified priest or astrologer who can guide it properly.

The planet now in charge

The chapter you are living through is the major period of Mercury, and it closes on February 11, 2034. How this period feels depends above all on where its ruler sits in your birth chart. Your Mercury sits in your 12th house, in Pisces, in the lunar mansion Revati, side by side with the Sun.

By sign, its dignity is debilitated. That sounds harsher than it is. Pisces is a watery, boundless sign, and a planet built for sorting, naming and measuring cannot lean on neat lists there. It has to think in images, impressions and connections instead. By overall strength, though, it is one of your most capable planets. Its strength score is 77%, which places it behind only Jupiter and Saturn. The sign makes the style unusual. The strength keeps it effective.

Together with the Sun it forms Budha-Aditya Yoga, the meeting of intellect and inner light. In the 12th house, this yoga works quietly rather than loudly. It gives a mind that understands by absorbing, reflects before it speaks, and often knows the answer before it can explain how. The reading of this chapter is therefore not a weak or scattered mind. It is a mind that works best in its own way, and that asks a little more effort whenever the world demands tidy, step-by-step output.

The support behind it

Pisces belongs to Jupiter, and your Jupiter is the strongest planet in your whole chart. It sits in your 5th house, in Leo, at 100% strength. Everything Mercury does in these years is backed by that learned, generous planet. Study, teaching, mentoring, creative projects and anything that turns knowledge into guidance for others all find easier ground now.

From its place, Mercury casts its gaze onto your 6th house, the area of daily work, service, routines and the practical problems you solve. This period therefore also asks for good working habits. It rewards the person who organises the details, improves a process, or serves others with skill.

The chapter it colours

- Skills and craft. This is a time to learn a method, sharpen a language, write, edit and analyse. Competence built now tends to last.
- Work behind the scenes. Research, preparation, planning and quiet expertise suit this period better than constant visibility. Settings abroad or away from the crowd can suit you well.
- Service and routine. Your working day, and how you structure it, becomes a real lever for progress.
- Inner life. Reflection, retreat and time alone are not a luxury in these years. They are where your best thinking happens.

Where you stand in it

More than half of this chapter now lies behind you. Since July 10, 2019 you have moved through the sub-periods of Ketu, Venus, the Sun, the Moon and Mars.

The current sub-period of Rahu began on August 10, 2026 and runs to February 26, 2029 . With Rahu placed in your 9th house, it turns the curiosity of this chapter toward wider horizons: unusual teachers, distant places and new philosophies.

After that comes the sub-period of Jupiter, from February 26, 2029 to June 4, 2031 . Here the ruler of the period works together with its own strong dispositor, so efforts in learning, teaching and creative work tend to land more easily.

The final stretch belongs to Saturn, from June 4, 2031 to February 11, 2034 . Saturn sits in own sign in your 10th house, so these closing years favour consolidating your professional work into something durable.

On February 11, 2034 , the period of Ketu begins, a different and more inward chapter. The skills you gather now are what you carry into it.

◆ ESSENCE

Your major period of Mercury runs to February 11, 2034 . Its ruler is unusual by sign but strong in overall power, and it is joined by the Sun and backed by your powerful Jupiter. These are years for building skill, thinking deeply and doing quiet, careful work that later becomes a foundation.

✿ PRACTICE

Give your mind one protected block of focused time each day for writing, study or research. On the weekday traditionally linked to Mercury, offer a small act of service connected to learning, such as donating books or helping someone with their studies.

⚠ NOTE

A mind this receptive can take on too many threads at once, and restlessness can creep into your evenings and sleep. Choose one main project per season, write down open loops before bed, and keep a steady wind-down routine. If sleep or nervous tension stays troublesome, please consult a qualified doctor.

❖ 5.2 Antardashas

A decade that moves from wide horizons to quiet depth

Sun: Pisces · 12th house

Moon: Gemini · 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn · 10th house

The next decade is shaped by two long chapters. The first is the Mercury major period, the one you are living now. The second is the Ketu major period, which begins on February 11, 2034. Inside each chapter, shorter sub-periods change the weather every couple of years. Each one brings forward its own planet's themes, filtered through the ruler of the larger chapter.

The ruler of your present chapter is Mercury, placed in the 12th house in Pisces. By dignity it is debilitated. By overall strength, however, it is among the more capable planets in your chart, and it sits beside the Sun in the same place, forming Budha-Aditya Yoga. The mind this chapter develops is reflective and intuitive rather than loud. It suits research, behind-the-scenes work, foreign settings and quiet analysis. Its sign is ruled by Jupiter, and that link matters for one of the seasons below.

Now: the Rahu sub-period, August 10, 2026 to February 26, 2029

This season began only weeks ago. Rahu sits in the 9th house, in Sagittarius, in Mula. That is the part of the chart concerned with higher learning, belief, teachers, long journeys and the father-line. Its main tendency is to widen your horizon. You may be drawn to an unconventional teacher, a course of study, a philosophy from another culture, or travel and contacts abroad. Because the major ruler works from the 12th house, much of this can happen quietly: in study, research or foreign surroundings rather than on a public stage.

Rahu is marked debilitated here and moves retrograde. In plain terms, the hunger for meaning is strong, but it can scatter across too many directions at once. It is better served by one serious path than by many half-started ones. Rahu also casts a full glance on the 3rd house, where your Moon and Ketu sit. That can make the mind livelier and more restless than usual. Steady routines, writing things down and talking ideas through with someone you trust will keep this curiosity productive. The season closes on February 26, 2029 .

The Jupiter sub-period, February 26, 2029 to June 4, 2031

This is likely to be the most naturally supported stretch of the decade. Jupiter is the strongest planet in your chart. It sits in the 5th house in Leo, the part of the chart given to learning, creativity, children and those you guide. Mercury occupies a sign that Jupiter rules, and so does Rahu. When this season arrives, the planet that hosts both earlier rulers takes the lead, which usually makes the handover a smooth one.

The themes are learning that turns into teaching, creative work, mentoring and delight in younger people or protégés. Jupiter also looks fully at the 9th house, the 11th house and the 1st house. That can bring clearer purpose, support and gains through your circles, and a steadier sense of confidence. Because Jupiter is retrograde, part of the growth may come from returning to earlier studies, reworking an old project or reconnecting with a former mentor. Think of this as traction: efforts in these areas tend to land more easily.

The Saturn sub-period, June 4, 2031 to February 11, 2034

This season brings forward the most commanding part of your chart. Saturn sits in its own sign in the 10th house, in Capricorn. Beside it is Mars, exalted in the same sign. This is where career, public standing and lasting achievement are strongest. Expect a period of responsibility, authority and structures you build to last. Recognition here tends to come through consistency rather than speed.

Saturn also looks fully at the 12th house, the 4th house and the 7th house. Rest, home life and partnership therefore need deliberate care while work is asking so much. Guard your sleep, keep time for the people closest to you, and let loyalty and reliability set the tone in your relationships. This season, and with it the whole Mercury chapter, closes on February 11, 2034 .

A new chapter: Ketu, from February 11, 2034

Ketu sits in the 3rd house in Gemini, beside your Moon. It is marked debilitated and moves retrograde. Its sign is ruled by Mercury, so the new chapter carries forward much of what the previous one taught. The tone changes from building outward to simplifying and deepening. Intuition sharpens, and less becomes more.

- Ketu, February 11, 2034 to July 10, 2034 : a settling-in season for letting go of what is no longer needed. Ketu looks fully at the 9th house, so questions of meaning and inner practice come to the fore.
- Venus, July 10, 2034 to September 9, 2035 : Venus sits in the 11th house in Aquarius. Friendships, community and networks become the main source of warmth, support and opportunity. Venus also looks at the 5th house, which brings creative enjoyment.
- Sun, September 9, 2035 to January 15, 2036 : the Sun sits in the 12th house in Pisces. This is a reflective season suited to retreat, study and spiritual practice. The Sun looks at the 6th house, so daily habits and routines deserve attention. For any medical concern, a qualified doctor is the right person to ask.
- Moon, January 15, 2036 to August 15, 2036 : the Moon and Ketu share the 3rd house in Gemini. Sensitivity rises, and so does the gift for writing and conversation. Calm evenings and good sleep matter more than usual.
- Mars, August 15, 2036 to January 11, 2037 : Mars, exalted in the 10th house, brings drive and initiative back to your work. It looks at the 1st house, the 4th house and the 5th house, which renews energy, home projects and creative plans.

Read as one map, the decade moves from exploring, to teaching, to building, and then to a wiser simplicity. Each step prepares the next one.

◆ ESSENCE

The coming decade moves from a widening search for meaning under Rahu, through a well-supported season of learning and teaching under Jupiter, to disciplined building under Saturn until February 11, 2034 . After that, the Ketu chapter turns the focus toward simplicity, intuition and inner depth.

✿ PRACTICE

At the start of each sub-period, write down one intention that fits its planet: one study path for Rahu, one teaching or creative project for Jupiter, one lasting structure for Saturn. Review the list when that season ends.

⚠ NOTE

During the Rahu sub-period, which ends on February 26, 2029 , the mind can race and interests can scatter. Anchor it with a fixed daily routine, a single chosen course of study and a few minutes of journaling or quiet practice each day.

❖ 5.3 Transits

The outer weather of the coming years, read through your own chart

The deciding factor for the years ahead is the period you are living in, more than the sky itself. You are in the major chapter of Mercury, and its sub-period of Rahu is now running. That chapter sets what is possible. The slow planets described here show when your efforts meet more resistance and when they find traction. Every position below is read two ways, from your rising sign and from your Moon, as of September 25, 2026.

Saturn: pacing the workload

Since March 29, 2025, Saturn has been moving through Pisces. That is your 12th house counted from the rising sign and the 10th house counted from your Moon. This configuration is known as Kantaka Shani. It brings a stretch of heavier responsibility and more visible duties, and work may ask more of you than it used to.

It is not a verdict on your career. Your natal Mars and Saturn both sit in your 10th house, and together they give you real staying power. What this transit asks for is pacing. It also moves through your 12th house, the area of rest, sleep and retreat, so the practical task is to protect your recovery time rather than borrow from it. To be clear: not Sade Sati, and not Ashtama Shani.

This transit window closes on June 2, 2027. After that, Saturn moves as follows:

- It steps into Aries from June 2, 2027 to October 20, 2027.
- It returns briefly to Pisces from October 20, 2027 to February 23, 2028. This return only affects timing. It is a chance to finish what the first pass began.
- It settles in Aries from February 23, 2028 until August 8, 2029.

In Aries, Saturn crosses your 1st house, the area of self, body and personal direction. At the same time it stands the 11th house from your Moon, the area of gains and support. Seen from the rising sign, this is a maturing passage: you may take your own path more seriously, and structure in daily habits pays off. Seen from the Moon, it is one of the more supportive positions Saturn can take, and it favours steady rewards that come through networks and sustained effort.

From August 8, 2029, Saturn moves into Taurus. This is your 2nd house, the area of family and resources, and the 12th house from your Moon. It opens a slower, consolidating chapter that is described more fully in the chapters on periods. It is a time for simplifying and building foundations, not for alarm.

Jupiter: renewal of your gifts

Right now Jupiter is in Cancer, from June 1, 2026 to October 31, 2026 . That is your 4th house from the rising sign and the 2nd house from your Moon. It softens the home front and supports your family circle and your speech. This is a good season to invest care in your living space.

From October 31, 2026 , Jupiter returns to Leo, the sign it occupies in your birth chart. That is your 5th house from the rising sign and the 3rd house from your Moon. Your natal Jupiter is the strongest planet in your chart, so its return tends to reawaken learning, teaching, creative work and joy with children or protégés. It moves back and forth, so its passes through Leo are:

- October 31, 2026 to January 24, 2027
- June 25, 2027 to November 26, 2027
- February 28, 2028 to July 24, 2028

Between these passes, it spends time in Cancer from January 24, 2027 to June 25, 2027 , and in Virgo from November 26, 2027 to February 28, 2028 .

Next, Jupiter moves through Virgo from July 24, 2028 to December 26, 2028 . That is your 6th house, the area of work routines and daily health habits, and the 4th house from your Moon. It is a good stretch for building routines that genuinely support you.

After that, Jupiter visits Libra from December 26, 2028 to March 29, 2029 , returns to Virgo from March 29, 2029 to August 24, 2029 , and re-enters Libra from August 24, 2029 . The passage through your 7th house, which is also the 5th house from your Moon, favours partnerships, agreements and the people you work most closely with.

Rahu and Ketu: ambition and home

Until November 25, 2026 , Rahu is in Aquarius. That is your 11th house, the area of friends, networks and gains, and the 9th house from your Moon. Meanwhile Ketu passes through Leo, your 5th house. Together they favour opportunities that arrive through community and trusted peers.

From November 25, 2026 to May 24, 2028 , Rahu moves through Capricorn. That is your 10th house, where it crosses your natal Mars and Saturn, and the 8th house from your Moon. At the same time Ketu moves through Cancer, your 4th house. The sub-period you are in also belongs to Rahu, so this passage deserves closer attention than usual:

- Ambition and workload rise.

- Opportunities for visibility can arrive quickly.
- Your home and inner life ask for protection.

Treat it as a season to prioritise, delegate and rest deliberately. It is not a threat to your standing. This transit window ends on May 24, 2028.

From May 24, 2028, this axis returns to its birth positions. Ketu moves into Gemini, over your natal Moon in your 3rd house. Rahu moves into Sagittarius, your 9th house. This is a natural point to review questions of meaning, teachers and travel, and how you think and speak.

Across these years the pattern stays consistent. Saturn asks you to pace yourself. Jupiter renews your learning and creativity. The nodes stir your ambition. Your efforts will land more easily when your rest is protected.

◆ ESSENCE

Until June 2, 2027, Saturn asks you to carry more responsibility at a steady pace, and from October 31, 2026 onwards Jupiter renews your gifts for learning, teaching and creating. Between November 25, 2026 and May 24, 2028, ambition rises; protect your home and your rest so that the drive builds rather than burns.

✦ PRACTICE

Keep a short weekly review with a list of your commitments beside a list of protected rest times, and hold to it especially through May 24, 2028.

⚠ NOTE

Through June 2, 2027, heavier workload can crowd out sleep and quiet time. Set a fixed wind-down routine each evening, and offer a small act of service to others on Saturdays as a steadying practice. If tiredness or poor sleep persists, please consult a qualified doctor.

❖ 5.4 Windows

Where the long chapter and the moving sky pull in the same direction

Sun: Pisces • 12th house

Moon: Gemini • 3rd house

Mars: Capricorn • 10th house

Your current chapter is set by Mercury as the major period lord, and the sub-period of Rahu began on August 10, 2026 and runs to February 26, 2029 . The major period sets what is on offer, and transits decide when it shows up. The windows below are the stretches when the slow-moving planets cross parts of your chart that this period already activates. In these windows your efforts gain traction more easily. They are not guarantees.

August 10, 2026 – February 26, 2029 : widening horizons (now)

Rahu sits in your birth chart in your 9th house, in Sagittarius. This is the area of teachers, beliefs, study and long journeys. Mercury is placed in your 12th house, in Pisces, which favours research, reflection and work connected with other countries or quieter settings. Together they make this a season for unusual learning, new mentors and questions about what your work is ultimately for.

November 25, 2026 – May 24, 2028 : ambition in the spotlight

During this span Rahu moves through Capricorn. That places it directly over your birth Mars and Saturn in your 10th house, the powerhouse of your chart. Here the sub-period lord is itself crossing your career sector, so dasha and transit plainly point the same way. Expect bigger responsibilities, more visibility and a hunger for the next step. In the same months Ketu moves through your 4th house, in Cancer, so home and rest need deliberate protection while ambition runs high. This window closes on May 24, 2028 .

March 29, 2025 – June 2, 2027 : responsibility at work

Saturn is moving through Pisces, in your 12th house. Its current status:

- Kantaka Shani
- not Sade Sati

In practical terms, the workload feels heavier and asks for structure rather than speed. It is a demand for pacing, not a threat to your standing, and this phase ends on June 2, 2027 .

October 31, 2026 – January 24, 2027 , June 25, 2027 – November 26, 2027 , February 28, 2028 – July 24, 2028 : the teacher returns

Jupiter moves back into Leo, the sign it occupies in your birth chart, in your 5th house. In your chart this planet has a strength of 100% , the highest of all your planets. These three passes bring renewed confidence, creative projects, and joy in teaching, learning or guiding younger people. They also give the searching quality of the current sub-period a wise, structured outlet.

February 23, 2028 – August 8, 2029 : a steadier self

Saturn crosses Aries, your 1st house, after a first brief visit from June 2, 2027 to October 20, 2027 . This touches how you carry yourself and how you pace your energy. It favours simplifying, maturing and choosing fewer, better commitments. The pass ends on August 8, 2029 .

February 26, 2029 – June 4, 2031 : the sub-period of Jupiter

The strongest planet in your chart now leads the sub-period. Jupiter moves through Libra across your 7th house from December 26, 2028 to March 29, 2029 , and again from August 24, 2029 , which highlights agreements, partnerships and trusted alliances. Rahu returns to Sagittarius from May 24, 2028 , reviving the search for meaning. From August 8, 2029 , Saturn moves into Taurus. That opens a slower, consolidating chapter, described more fully in the transits section.

June 4, 2031 – February 11, 2034 : building to last

The sub-period of Saturn closes the major period of Mercury. In your birth chart this planet stands in its own sign in your 10th house, with a strength of 82% . It rewards patient consolidation of what you have built at work. The major period of Ketu begins on February 11, 2034 .

◆ ESSENCE

The current sub-period of Rahu, running to February 26, 2029 , pairs with its own transit over your career sector until May 24, 2028 . That makes this a season of growing responsibility and widening horizons. The returns of Jupiter to your 5th house are the brightest windows for learning, teaching and creative confidence.

✻ PRACTICE

At the start of each window above, write down one clear intention for it. Review that note when the window closes, so every stretch leaves something concrete behind.

⚠ NOTE

From now until June 2, 2027 , and again while Rahu crosses your 10th house until May 24, 2028 , ambition and workload can crowd out rest. Protect fixed hours for sleep and home each week, and plan big tasks in stages rather than all at once. If tension or tiredness persists, speak with a qualified doctor.

A VEDIC READING

❖ 6.1 Gemstones

One stone to consider, one to set aside, and gentler remedies for the rest

The deciding factor: your rising sign

Your ascendant is Aries, and its ruler Mars stands exalted in Capricorn, in your 10th house. That ascendant sets the rule for gemstones in your chart. A stone amplifies a planet, so it should only amplify a planet that acts as a helper for this ascendant. The other planets are better supported through mantra, charity and daily habits. By that rule, your chart allows exactly one stone and clearly rules out another.

The stone that may support you

The one gemstone your chart allows belongs to the Sun, the traditional stone of the Sun. For your ascendant, the Sun rules one of the houses of fortune and creativity, which makes it a genuine ally. It sits in the 12th house in a friendly sign, with a strength of 70%. This is a quiet placement. Your creative confidence and sense of self-worth work more from the inside than on a public stage.

Strengthening the Sun may help that inner light come forward. It can support clearer self-expression, the courage to put your own work into the world, and a steadier sense that you have the right to take up space. This is support, not a transformation. The stone lends traction to qualities that are already yours.

Please do not buy or wear it on your own judgement. The quality of the stone, its weight, the metal, the finger and the day of first wearing all matter. A qualified consultation is essential before you wear it.

The stone to leave aside

The stone of Mercury, the traditional stone of Mercury, is not for your chart. For your ascendant, Mercury rules houses of effort and strain. Amplifying it with a stone could heighten those themes rather than ease them.

This matters now because you are in the Mercury Mahadasha, currently in its Rahu sub-period. Mercury is debilitated in the 12th house, yet its overall strength is 77% , among the strongest in your chart. Your mind is capable and reflective. It simply works best when you tend it gently rather than force it.

The better support for Mercury comes through service and use:

- teaching or sharing what you know
- helping students or anyone who is learning
- regular writing or journaling to settle a busy mind
- keeping your word carefully in small matters

Gentle support for the Moon and Venus

the Moon sits in the 3rd house alongside Ketu, with a strength of 65% . It shapes your emotional steadiness and intuition. You do not need a stone here. Its mantra, recited calmly on Mondays, can be a grounding anchor:

Oṃ Śrāṃ Śrīm Śrauṃ Saḥ Chandrāya Namaḥ

You can pair it with a Monday offering of rice, milk, white cloth, silver or sugar, given to women and the elderly, or used to feed those in need.

Venus sits in the 11th house, with a strength of 68% . It shapes friendship, affection and the support that reaches you through your circle. Its mantra, recited on Fridays:

Oṃ Drāṃ Drīm Drauṃ Saḥ Śukrāya Namaḥ

For the Friday offering, give white cloth, curd, ghee, rice, perfume or flowers to young women and artists.

The planets that need no stone

Mars, Saturn and Jupiter are already strong, at 74% , 82% and 100% . They need no amplification from a stone. The nodes Rahu and Ketu are also never supported with gemstones. Their energies are best met through steady routines and a calm, unhurried attitude toward change.

◆ ESSENCE

Your chart allows one stone, that of the Sun, and only after a qualified consultation. The stone of Mercury should be left aside. During the Mercury period, service, learning and the mantras of the Moon and Venus are your gentlest and safest support.

✿ PRACTICE

On Monday mornings, recite the mantra of the Moon quietly several times, and then make one small offering of rice or milk to someone who needs it.

⚠ NOTE

Please do not wear the stone of Mercury. Support that planet through teaching, service and journaling instead. Before wearing the stone of the Sun, consult a qualified Jyotish practitioner who can verify the stone and advise on its proper wearing.

❖ 6.2 Practices

Sound, rhythm and giving: small practices for a steadier mind and a warmer heart

The gentlest remedies a chart can suggest are sound, rhythm and generosity. Two planets in your chart invite this kind of care. The first is the Moon, your mind, placed in the 3rd house together with Ketu. The second is Venus, the planet of love, beauty and pleasure, placed in the 11th house, the house of friendship and gains. None of what follows is an obligation. Think of it as a small menu to try, and keep what feels natural.

The Moon — a place for the mind to land

With Ketu beside it in the 3rd house, the house of speech, writing and courage, your mind tends to be quick, intuitive and at times a little far away. The Moon carries steady strength at 65%. These practices do not correct anything; they give that fast, perceptive mind a calm place to return to.

- Seed mantra. Om Śrām Śrīm Śraum Sah Chandrāya Namaḥ. Say it softly for a few quiet rounds, ideally at the same time each day. The regularity matters more than the count.
- Verse. If you prefer a verse to a seed sound:

Dadhi-śaṅkha-tuṣārābhaṁ kṣīrodārṇava-sambhavam | Namāmi śaśinaṁ somaṁ sambhor-mukṣa-bhūṣaṇam |

- Day. Begin, or give a little extra attention, on the weekday traditionally sacred to the Moon.
- Giving. Tradition links this planet to caring for women and elders and to feeding people who go hungry. Simple, nourishing gifts in white suit its tone: plain staples, something milky or sweet, a clean white cloth, a small silver item. A shared meal or an hour spent with an older relative counts just as much.

Venus — warmth that flows through your circle

Venus in the 11th house ties affection, pleasure and resources to friendship and community, with good strength at 68%. The practices for this planet are about beauty and appreciation freely given.

- Seed mantra. Om Drām Drīm Drauṁ Saḥ Śukrāya Namaḥ.
- Verse.

*Hima-kunda-mṛṇālābhaṁ daityānām paramaṁ gurum | Sarva-śāstra-pravaktāraṁ
bhārgavaṁ praṇamāmyaham ||*

- Day. The weekday traditionally sacred to Venus, at the close of the working week.
- Giving. Support young women and artists. A ticket to a friend's performance, buying directly from a maker, or mentoring a younger woman all belong here. Traditional offerings are white, fragrant or lovely: fresh flowers, a light perfume, simple dairy dishes and rice prepared with care.

Holding it all through the present period

You are now in the period of Mercury, with its sub-period of Rahu. Mercury sits in a sign where it is debilitated, yet it holds real strength at 77%. Its best offering is service through words: teaching, explaining, or sharing what you know without asking for anything back. This fits alongside the moon practice above, which keeps a busy period mentally grounded.

Keep it modest. A few minutes of sound on a regular day, and one generous act on another, is plenty. If a day is missed, simply begin again. The practice is meant to steady you, not to add another duty to a full life.

◆ ESSENCE

Your gentle practices centre on the Moon, for a calm and grounded mind, and on Venus, for warmth that flows through friendship. Short, regular mantra and simple giving on their traditional days are enough. Consistency matters more than intensity.

♣ PRACTICE

Choose one practice only: say the Moon seed mantra for a few quiet minutes on the Moon's weekday, and add one small act of feeding or visiting an elder. Keep it up for a season before adding anything else.

⚠ NOTE

Take care not to turn these practices into another performance goal, which would pull against the calm they are meant to bring. If the Sanskrit pronunciation feels uncertain, learn it once from a qualified teacher or a trusted recording. Until then, a sincere, quiet recitation is perfectly enough.

❖ 6.3 Lifestyle

Pace the fire, protect the quiet

The deciding factor for how you live day to day is the pairing in your 10th house. Mars, the ruler of your Aries ascendant, stands exalted in Capricorn, right beside Saturn, placed in its own sign. Together they create enormous drive joined to real staying power. Your chart does not ask you to become less ambitious. It asks you to arrange your days so this engine builds steadily instead of overheating.

Pace the fire so it builds

Mars wants speed and Saturn wants endurance. Your life runs best when neither one wins outright. Some habits that honour both:

- Work in defined blocks. Set a clear start, a clear finish and one main priority per day. Saturn rewards structure, and Mars does its best work when it has a single target.
- Give the fire a physical outlet. Brisk walking, strength work or any movement that leaves you pleasantly tired lets restless energy burn cleanly rather than turning into tension.
- Close the workday deliberately. A short ritual such as tidying the desk or writing tomorrow's first task helps the mind leave the office behind.

In your current Mercury–Rahu chapter, horizons tend to widen and ambitions can multiply. Choose fewer commitments and see them through, which is exactly the kind of lasting work your 10th house is built for.

Guard your rest

the Sun and Mercury sit together in your 12th house, the area of sleep, solitude and retreat. Mars and Saturn also both turn their gaze toward the part of your chart that governs home and inner peace. So rest and a calm home are not luxuries for you. They are the ground your achievements stand on. Some supports:

- A regular bedtime and a screen-free hour before sleep.
- One corner of your home kept only for quiet, with no work in it.
- Short periods of solitude each week that are planned for, not squeezed in.

If sleep, tension or fatigue keeps troubling you, please see a qualified doctor. The chart shows only where to pay attention.

A harbour for a quick mind the Moon sits with Ketu in your 3rd house. This gives a fast, intuitive, sometimes wandering mind, and the Moon carries the gentlest strength rating in your chart at 65%. Mercury, the planet of thought, is debilitated in your 12th house, yet it holds a strength rating of 77%, among your strongest. With the Sun it forms the Budha-Aditya Yoga, which gives thinking that is reflective, imaginative and at its best in quiet. What settles this mind:

- A few lines of writing each morning to anchor the day.
- Doing one thing at a time rather than juggling screens and conversations.
- For Mercury, service works better than any object. Helping someone learn, explaining patiently, or supporting a student honours this planet gracefully.

Let wisdom and friendship feed you

Jupiter is the strongest planet in your chart, rated 100%, and it sits in your 5th house. Regular learning, teaching and creative play genuinely restore you. Venus in your 11th house shows that nourishment also comes through trusted friends and community. Keep a weekly learning ritual, and protect time with people who both steady and inspire you.

◆ ESSENCE

Your chart pairs a powerful, disciplined drive in the 10th house with a need for quiet in the 12th house. You thrive when ambition is paced, rest is protected, and your quick mind is given structure, writing and good company.

✻ PRACTICE

On the day of the Moon, sit quietly for a few minutes and recite the beeja Om Śrām Śrīm Śraum Sah Chandrāya Namaḥ. Follow it with a simple offering of rice or milk to someone elderly or in need.

⚠ NOTE

With Mars and Saturn so strong in your 10th house, it is easy to keep working long after the body has asked for a pause. The remedy is simple: set a firm end to each workday, protect your sleep, and move your body daily. If tension or exhaustion lingers, consult a qualified doctor.

SUMMARY

❖ Summary

1. Your career house is the powerhouse of your chart: exalted Mars and own-sign Saturn in the 10th form Ruchaka and Sasa yogas in your strongest sign.
2. Your sense of self grows through visible, purposeful action, because your ascendant ruler sits in the house of career and looks back at you.
3. Drive and discipline are yoked together; your task is to pace the fire so that it builds rather than burns.
4. Your soul learns through the mind: a vargottama Gemini Moon as Atmakaraka turns curiosity and speech into steady understanding.
5. Moon beside Ketu gives a deep, intuitive inner life that settles best through routine, writing and honest conversation.
6. Jupiter, the strongest planet in your chart, sits vargottama in your 5th house, making learning, teaching, creativity and care for the young your most reliable gifts.
7. The Budha-Aditya Yoga in your 12th house gives a quiet, reflective intelligence, and Mercury's strong overall power balances its placement by sign.
8. Home and rest need deliberate protection: your 4th house is pressed by a busy working life, and your 12th house carries the chart's lowest ashtakavarga score.
9. Love and gains tend to grow through friendship and trusted networks, since Venus, lord of your 2nd and 7th, sits in the 11th and is blessed by Jupiter. Saturn asks for a mature, lasting bond, and the manglik factor is mild and cancelled.
10. The Mercury–Rahu sub-period, which began on August 10, 2026 and runs to February 26, 2029, widens your horizons and draws you toward an unconventional, self-tested search for meaning.

Year checklist

- Until June 2, 2027, while Saturn asks you to carry more responsibility, plan your workload in steady weekly stages rather than in bursts.

- From November 25, 2026, as ambition rises, set clear boundaries around home time and protect at least one unhurried evening a week.
 - Use Jupiter's time in Leo (October 31, 2026 to January 24, 2027, and again from June 25, 2027) to begin a course, a teaching role or a creative project.
 - Keep a short daily writing or journaling habit so your quick, intuitive mind has a calm place to land.
 - Choose one short mantra practice for the Moon on Mondays or for Venus on Fridays, and value regularity over intensity.
 - Set aside a simple act of remembrance or charity to honour your ancestors and your father's line.
